Aid to Britain

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Restriction of this Government's arms loan aid to the British Commonwealth of Nations and Ireland was proposed yesterday in a substitute bill by Representative Kenneth Simpson (Republican), of New York.

Simpson, friend of Wendell Willkie and a former national committeeman from New York, said he talked with Willkie before introducing the measure, "but the bill is my own."

It provides that only Congress, by concurrent resolution, can extend arms aid to other nations than Britain and Ireland. The Administration's draft gives the President discretion to determine which countries are "vital to the defense of the United States."

Like Willkie, Simpson said he favored the lend-lease measure "with modification" and proposed a two-year time limitation on the President's powers in the bill.

Meantime, Administration leaders said they would not oppose a reasonable time limitation on the bill. But Speaker Rayburn said any time limitation should run concurrently with the emergency. The bill, he said, is to meet an emergency "and the power ought to be for that time."

Earlier, Rayburn won hands down in the House on the lend-lease measure's first jurisdictional test. An effort by the House Military Affairs Committee to wrest control of the bill from the Foreign Affairs Committee, to which the Speaker had assigned it, was defeated by a voice vote.

Congress Gets Army Bid

The Army, reviving a World War practice, has invited members of the Senate and House Committees on Military Affairs and Appropriations to attend weekly conferences at the War Department on the progress of the arms program.

First of the meetings, at which Senate committeemen will be furnished confidential data on arms developments, will be held this morning.

Some Congressmen, however, indicated they might spurn the War Department invitation, contending that the Army officials should come to Capitol Hill to keep Congress informed of what is happening.

Father in Hospital After Smashing Way Into Blazing Home to Save Twin Sons, 3

Rushes Children, Slightly Injured, From Accokeek, Md.

A father's heroism was rewarded yesterday with "the most important thing"—the safety of his twin 3-year-old sons—although all his belongings were in ashes.

The father, Melvin Hancock, 28, a powder attendant at Indian Head, drove 15 miles in 15 minutes from the ruins of his home in Accokeek to bring his sons, Earl and Gerald, to Providence Hospital here after he had smashed his way into the blazing house to rescue the children.

Hancock was tinkering with his auto in the yard of the house, off the Indian Head road, while his wife, Mrs. Lucille Hancock, 21, was at work in the wash house. The children were playing in the kitchen.

Mrs. Hancock went to the kitchen door, opened it and "smoke rushed into her face," Hancock said from a bed in the hospital.

The front door was locked from the inside. Mrs. Hancock smashed a side window, severing a vein in her arm, and Hancock ripped the sash out with his hand. He crawled in, on hands and knees.

Earl he found crouched in one room between a bed and the stove.

"He didn't cry," said Hancock. "I carried him out to the window and got a breath of fresh air. I made up my mind I wouldn't go out of there until I found Gerald. I called, but there was no answer. Then I saw his little hand coming up over the side of the bed. If he had crawled under the bed I'd never have gotten him."

Hancock bundled the burned children and his wife into the auto and dashed to Providence, "because I've been here before and I know it's a good place."

The children were treated for slight burns of the face, while Hancock, who had forgotten his own injuries, was put in bed with first-degree burns of the face and arms. Mrs. Hancock went to the home of her sister, Mrs. Vesta Holt, 308 Sixteenth Street Southeast.

Hancock said he believed that the fire probably started when one of the children pulled a burning paper bag out of the kitchen stove.

"I've lost everything except my wife and boys," said Hancock. "And they're the most important."

2 'Senators' To Claim W. Va. Seat Today

Appointees of New And Ex-Governor Pose Unprecedented Issue

By the Associated Press

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 13.—Two men nationally prominent in their fields will be in Washington tomorrow bearing commissions for a single office and leave up to the United States Senate a precedent-breaking decision.

Never in 162 years, the records said, have incoming and outgoing Governors of a State claimed the right to make a Senate appointment—as did newly inaugurated Gov. M. M. Neely and former Gov. Homer A. Holt.

Holt's choice, Clarence E. Martin, of Martinsburg, former president of the American Bar Association, already was in Washington

Joseph Rozier, president of Fairmont State Teachers College and former president of the National Education Association, left tonight after Neely handed him a commission.

In the end the Senate will be the arbiter of the seating of a member to complete Neely's unexpired term.

The principal legal issue was whether even a split-second existed between the time Neely's resignation as Senator became effective and he became Governor.

He took the oath in the seclusion of the executive mansion at exactly midnight. At the same time, Holt was in the secretary of state's office declaring for the third time his selection of Martin, the appointment to be effective at the moment of the expiration of Neely's term.

Greeks Press Two Drives On Valona

Predict Greatest Offensive of War; Resistance Scant

By the Associated Press

Athens, Jan. 13.—Greek soldiers, reporting scant resistance, stabbed deeper into Italian defense positions below Valona today and spokesmen expressed the hope this might prove the greatest offensive of the war in Albania.

Although they claimed Fascist lines were crumbling at some points, authorities in Athens still lacked confirmation of reports from the Yugoslav frontier that Tepeleni, fortified mountain town guarding an Italian-built highway to the Port of Valona, had fallen.

Capture of Tepeleni would give the Greeks a jumping-off place for a renewed thrust toward Valona, sole southern Albania port remaining in Italian hands.

A companion drive northward along the coast was said to have brought the Greeks within 30 miles of Valona. New gains were claimed also for forces which swept northward from Klisura, taken last week. From the battered city a road leads down from the mountains northwestward toward Berati.

A government spokesman said the Italians had strengthened their lines with reserves poured into Albania by sea and air, but that news from the front showed the situation as "very satisfactory" for the Greeks. More prisoners and many abandoned Italian wounded were captured by Greek patrols, he added.

A delayed dispatch from an Associated Press correspondent accompanying the Greeks beyond Klisura said the best Greek infantrymen, equipped with automatic rifles and machine guns, have been thrown into the action there.

Rome, Jan. 13.—Another change of Italian commanders in Albania was made today when Gen. Ubaldo Soddu "for reasons of health" was removed and the command taken over by Gen. Ugo Cavallero, chief of the general staff.

Gen. Cavallero, who succeeded Marshal Pietro Badoglio on December 6, retains his post on the general staff.

Gen. Soddu, the former undersecretary of war, replaced the original commander in Albania, Gen. Sebastiano Visconti Prasca, on November 9, when it became clear that things had gone badly with the Greek campaign. Now again, events in Albania are believed to be approaching an important phase, which may be connected with forthcoming events in Bulgaria, or with a radical alteration of the Italian mind.

Politically, the appointment unifies the entire Albanian situation, for Gen. Cavallero is the father-in-law of Francisco Jacomini Di San Lavino, the lieutenant general in Albania, and is known for his party loyalty, as well as his military career. Thus, the party and the army will be working in the closest collaboration in Albania.

Today's communique states nothing about the operations in Greece, except "normal activity of patrols and artillery." According to the war bulletin, there has been no change in the lines for several months.

The heroes of the campaign for Italy are the 10,000 Alpini of the Giulia Division, who have fought steadily since October 28, being cited often in the bulletins. Today the three regiments of the division were proposed for the gold medal—Italy's highest award.

It would seem that another British naval force is coming through the Mediterranean, because today's war bulletin tells of an attack by an Italian torpedo plane against "a large enemy unit in the western Mediterranean" which is stated to have been torpedoed.

It is now claimed that the battleship mentioned as having been hit on Thursday, when the series of attacks against the British convoys began, was of the Malaya type, 31,100 tons, which has been in active service since 1916.

Takoma Has First Auto Death; Reynolds Seeks Traffic Probe

Suggests House And Senate Make Joint Inquiry

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, who is slated to become chairman of the Senate District Committee, yesterday suggested that a joint traffic inquiry be conducted by subcommittees of the Senate and House District Committees.

His proposal followed an indorsement of a probe of Washington's traffic problems by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, ranking majority member of the House District Committee. The inquiry was first recommended by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois.

Schulte, who probably will act as chairman of the House District Committee until Chairman Randolph recovers from an illness, said the traffic problem would be one of the

Reviving the Vigilantes

By Howard F. Wentworth

Drastic steps, designed to get at the root of Washington's traffic troubles and curb the wave of auto killings which have alarmed the city since January 1, were voted unanimously yesterday by police and traffic control authorities.

Foremost among measures to be taken is immediate revival of the "Committee of 100"—selected citizen observers who will report to the Traffic Department all flagrant violations which come to their attention.

Aroused by the worst series of traffic tragedies in the District's history—eight persons have been killed since the first of the year—special conferences were held yesterday by police officials, traffic heads and committees of the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council. Out of the discussions came the following recommendations:

To revive the "Committee of 100," eliminating all secrecy surrounding its membership.

To tighten enforcement on motoring violations which contribute to accidents—speed, reckless driving, weaving, etc.

To invoke the little-known and seldom-used regulation prohibiting pedestrians from crossing in the middle of blocks while cars are approaching from either direction.

To seek immediate legislation increasing the police force per-

260th Coast Artillery Off To Fort Bliss

Throngs of Friends, Relatives Delay Guard Unit's Departure

The 260th Coast Artillery, first District National Guard unit to be inducted into Federal service, rolled southward yesterday on the first leg of a 2,400-mile journey toward a year of training at Fort Bliss, Tex.

The regiment's first battalion moved out by road in six sections, the first leaving the armory at Maine avenue and O street southwest shortly after 10 a. m. The second battalion left by train at 8 p. m.

Departure of the first battalion's convoy was delayed by unexpected scores of relatives and friends, who swarmed to the armory at Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, got under foot, but added in morale what they took away in military precision.

Yesterday's hop for the first battalion was brief, ending at Richmond, where the outfit settled for the night in armories of the Virginia National Guard. Today it will pull out of there for Fort Bragg, N. C., second overnight halt on the trip. It will not reach Fort Bliss until January 29.

There the reunited regiment, commanded by Col. Walter W. Burns, will find a modern camp ready for it, with pyramidal tents walled and floored and heated by natural gas. Mess halls will be in wooden buildings, with all up-to-date gadgets like electric refrigerators and mechanical potato peelers ready in the kitchens.

It will be the third National Guard regiment to reach Bliss and will bring to 10,000 the number of men stationed at the Army's newest antiaircraft firing center. When all troops have arrived, the camp will contain more than 27,000 men in six Guard and Regular antiaircraft regiments.

Departure of the 260th leaves in the District Guard only the 121st Engineers, the first battalion, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, and the Twenty-ninth Division Special Troops, all part of the Twenty-ninth

200 Passengers Are Taken Off S.S. Manhattan

2 Coast Guard Cutters Unable to Move Grounded Liner

By the Associated Press

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 13.—Coast Guardsmen, working in a moderately high sea kicked up by a brisk breeze, removed the last of 200 passengers from the stricken luxury liner Manhattan tonight and brought them safely ashore.

The nearest thing to a mishap ended happily when Guardsmen grabbed a woman who lost her balance while being lowered to a small surf boat and nearly fell overboard.

Plans were made to have the tug Willet, using kedge anchors to take advantage of swells lifting the ship, attempt early tomorrow to pull the Manhattan free.

The 24,000-ton cruise ship went aground last night, 9 miles north of here.

The Coast Guard cutters Vigilante and Mojave tugged for several hours in a futile effort to free the steamship today.

The Seaboard Air Line Railway was commissioned to take back north any passengers who wished to return. Temporary quarters were arranged for the others at the Palm Beach Biltmore Hotel.

There was no immediate explanation of why the vessel grounded last night, some 250 yards from shore under a clear and moonlit sky.

The passengers, bound on a pleasure cruise from New York to San Francisco by way of the Panama Canal, displayed little excitement.

U. S. Set to Absorb British Holdings

An American market supplied with record amounts of money yesterday prepared to absorb vast British investments in America.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau revealed he had been informed that the United Kingdom was ready to do business with United States investment trusts who have been negotiating for "direct" British investments that may total as high as $850,000,000.

Judge Regrets Auto Fine Limit

The increase in traffic accidents caused Judge George D. Neilson to crack down on speeders yesterday in District Traffic Court.

"I regret that I cannot fine you any higher," he said as he imposed the maximum of $25 on William A. Johnson, 32, machinist, charged by Policeman R. E. Burton, of the Eleventh Precinct, with traveling 70 miles an hour on Nichols Avenue Southeast.

Judge Neilson heard 39 speeding cases. In four, he gave maximum fines of $25; one, $20; two, $15; 20, $10, and 12, $5.

Army Boys to Sing and Like It For New Hostess From District

Mrs. Emma J. Foster, a clerk in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who possesses a Southern drawl thick enough to cut with a knife, has been appointed Mama to the new soldiers at Fort Bragg, N. C.

And are they going to sing!

It's Mrs. Foster's big talent, one she used on the Chautauqua platform and more recently, and informally, in CCC camps of the Washington area.

They'll sing what they please, maybe concentrate on one, as the Australians did on "The Wizard of Oz." More than this, however, as the camp's senior hostess, Mrs. Foster wants to show visiting mothers, sisters and other relatives of the boys that they are having the best time Army life permits. She wants to make the relatives comfortable and give them a good time, too, she said yesterday.

Mrs. Emma J. Foster

A native of Mount Airy, N. C., Mrs. Foster, who lives at 2000 Connecticut Avenue, obtained the position in competition with 700 other applicants.

For a number of years she toured with the United States Army Band as a booker and promoter of engagements, giving her a preview at least of the showmanship her new job requires. So Mrs. Foster feels she is well enough fitted for the job of keeping up the Army's morale. She'll begin it on February 1.

Production Problem

Planes Grow Old Too Fast To Build En Masse, Wright Says

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The House Naval Committee was told yesterday that American warplane production probably cannot ever go into mass production and that, unless obsolete craft are accepted, the Administration goal of 50,000 planes a year cannot be met.

Burdette Wright, vice president of the Curtiss-Wright Airplane Division, testified that the "violent competition" for air supremacy made it doubtful that the industry could ever standardize manufacture of first-line warplanes and institute mass production methods.

This testimony, Chairman Vinson later declared, indicated that President Roosevelt's goal of 50,000 planes a year output could be attained only by accepting some planes that are outmoded when delivered.

The goal can be reached, Vinson said, by standardizing production on various types periodically. Those which had been in production for some time necessarily could not include the latest improvements, he noted.

"As soon as you standardize one type of plane," he explained, "new improvements come along. In order to keep up-to-date, you have

Aboard a British Warship in the Mediterranean, Jan 10 (via Alexandria, delayed).—The German air force came to the assistance of Italy's faltering forces today with an intensive attack on the British fleet in the central Mediterranean after British warships sank an Italian destroyer in a spectacular running battle.

The naval engagement was fought within artillery range of one of the strongest Italian bases in the Mediterranean, the island of Pantelleria, 65 miles from the Sicilian coast.

A few hours later Italian and German planes appeared for the first of five determined attacks. Fighting continued almost incessantly until dusk. At least seven Axis planes were shot down.

In London the British Admiralty declined to comment on the reported Mediterranean battle.

(On January 11 both Rome and Berlin communiques mentioned the engagement. The Italians claimed to have hit at least three British warships (an aircraft carrier, a cruiser and a destroyer) in an at-

Nazis Single Out Southwest City in Britain

Incendiaries Make Night Look Like 'Grotesque Fairyland'

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), Jan. 14.—The German Luftwaffe concentrated a major assault on a southwest coastal town last night and early today, unleashing high-explosive bombs and dropping thousands of incendiaries which the townspeople said made the night "very much like a grotesque fairyland."

It was feared the casualty list would be heavy.

In singling out the town for the main raid of the night, the Nazis followed their custom of splashing it with incendiaries to light the way for bombers which unloaded the heavy explosives.

2 Shelters Struck

The women's ward of one hospital suffered a direct bomb hit and another hospital was damaged. Two surface shelters also were hit, as was a church.

Volunteer fire fighters tackled the incendiaries as rapidly as they fell.

The Germans also dropped explosives on two towns in South Wales and machine-gunned a third.

Meanwhile London, the objective of a smashing "fire raid" last night, was free of alarm long past the usual time for the nocturnal visits.

Fires Begun Below London

Civilians by the hundreds gave firemen a hand in smothering last night's three and a half hours firebomb shower and the government announced the situation was quickly brought under control.

A town in southwest England was pummelled for several hours in another Sunday night raid. An official report said "a small number of persons" was killed.

The Germans said big fires were started north and south of the bend in the Thames River, below London, last night. They said Brighton and Eastbourne were among places bombed on the English south coast.)

The first bodies were brought out today from the ruins of a London subway crossing hit by a German bomb Saturday night. Workers still probed the ruins for additional victims and cranes swung tons of debris from the gaping crater.

Three persons were seriously hurt here yesterday when their heavy coupe knocked over a tree at 4918 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Driver of the vehicle, which was demolished, was James Butler, colored, 34, of 1930 New Hampshire Avenue. He told police he fell asleep at the wheel.

Taken to Emergency Hospital, Butler was treated for shock and internal injuries. The other passengers were Dorothy Height, 29, colored, 2645 Fifteenth Street Northwest, who suffered a broken leg and internal injuries, and Lela O. Scott, colored, 36, of 1817 Corcoran Street Northwest, who received face and body injuries.

An Alexandria, Va., man and woman escaped serious injury early last night when their car struck the ironwork of the Highway Bridge and overturned.

Police said Benjamin Cohen, 31, of 1123 King Street, the driver, lost control of the machine when he bent over to pick up a cigarette that had blown back inside after he had thrown it from the window.

His companion, Frieda Fleisha, 36, of 1220 King Street, was treated at Emergency Hospital for face lacerations and dismissed.

A coroner's jury yesterday held Louis A. Smith, colored, 33, of 1019 South Carolina Avenue Southeast, for action of the grand jury in connection with the traffic death Saturday of Walter Edward Moorman, colored, 47, of 1400 Twenty-eighth Street Northwest.

Mrs. Amanda Faust, colored, 58, of 31 H Street Northwest, suffered a fracture of the right leg when struck by an automobile at Fifteenth Street and Benning Road Northeast.

Police listed Roy Smith, colored, 40, of 4607 Sheriff Road Northeast, as driver.

A two-car collision at Eighth and E Streets Northwest sent Charles Nelson, colored, 32, of 636 Q Street Northwest, to Freedmen's Hospital for treatment. Nelson was operating one car, according to police, while Harry King, colored, 26, of 443 S Street Northwest, was operator of the second vehicle.

In Mount Rainier, Md., Katherine Fuller, 11, of 3420 Thirty-fifth Street, was knocked down by a youth on a bicycle. She was treated at Children's Hospital for a fracture of the left elbow.

Harry W. Ross, 50, of 425 Second Street Northeast, and his 7-year-old daughter, Audrey, were taken to Casualty Hospital with injuries to the face and legs after they had been hit by an auto while crossing near their home. Police listed the driver as Reginald Martin, 40, of 214 Seventh Street Northeast.

Also felled near his home was Billy Tucker, 11, of 700 E Street Southeast, who was brough to Providence Hospital with a severely hurt right foo. Driver of the auto, police said, was Harry Burke, of 2435 Thirty-Third Street Southeast.

C. W. Copinger, 54, of 1774 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, was found semiconscious inside his damaged automobile at Connecticut and Florida Avenues Northwest. Police were unable to learn details of the accident. Copinger was taken to Garfield Hospital.

Drayton Attends Session

Charles D. Drayton, member of the District School Board, whose recent letter to The Post stirred considerable interest in reconstituting the "Committee of 100" which operated here in 1934, was an invited guest at the advisory council meeting.

Drayton, whose daughter is still in the hospital with injuries received in a traffic mishap Christmas Eve, read to the council's legislative and enforcement committee a list of recommendations which he already had submitted to The Post. The committee's action was based principally on these suggestions.

Earlier in the day, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, summoned to his office all commanding officers and district inspectors. It was decided in a two-hour conference to strike immediately at careless jaywalkers and reckless motorists.

Special orders went to all precincts calling for increased vigilance against speeders, drivers who weave in and out of traffic lanes and motorists who fail to observe right-of-way laws.

The so-called jaywalking law which Maj. Brown said he would strictly enforce prohibits pedestrians from crossing streets between intersections when they "constitute a hazard" to oncoming vehicles. Warnings will be issued and arrests made in flagrant cases, he said.

Brown also said special attention will be given motorists who refuse to yield the right of way to pedestrians at crosswalks.

Revival of the "Committee of 100" will be asked of the Commissioners as soon as possible, Col. L. C. Crawford, member of the advisory council's legislative and enforcement committee, proposed all names of the new group be published in the newspapers and any attempt at secrecy be removed.

It was proposed that operations of the citizen traffic observers be financed from the Traffic Department's $7,500 educational fund. Members of the committee are to be selected by local traffic officials and must have high qualifications for the job—such as actual experience in traffic problems or a keen, civic interest in reducing accidents and saving lives.

Churches May Participate

It was pointed out that with the appointment of a similar committee in Dallas, Tex., recently the city went 140 days without a traffic fatality.

It was agreed at both meetings that the "entire driving and walking public must be aroused against needless traffic slaughters" if the city's accident-prevention program is to succeed.

Clergymen will be asked to join the crusade by warning their congregations in Sunday sermons against the dangers of negligent walking and driving habits.

Under the "Committee of 100" plan, a motorist who is reported by three different observers will be called before the Board of Revocation and Suspension of Drivers' Permits to show cause why his driving privileges should not be revoked or suspended.

In instances where a driver is summoned before the board, his accusers on the committee will be called to testify as to the time, place and offense.

The committee members will be instructed to disregard parking violations and report only accident-breeding infractions while autos are in motion.

It was explained that this committee would augment the present undermanned Police Department and would function only until the department may be built up to adequate strength.

In line with this, the advisory council group voted to seek legislation raising the extra compensation of motorcycle police from $120 a year to $240—just double— in order to attract additional members of the force for motorcycle duty.

R.A.F. Raids Axis From Venice To Nazi Trenches on Channel

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 13.—A British air offensive by day and night, aimed at Axis shipping and oil resources and at German troops in trenches across the English Channel, was reported today by the air ministry.

Attacks yesterday stretched from the "invasion coast" of Nazi-occupied France to oil refineries near Venice, at the head of the Adriatic.

British sources, crediting the Royal Air Force with a "slight edge" over the Luftwaffe, foresaw the recent daylight blows as beginning the preparation for a British offensive on the Continent as well as an attempt to break up any Nazi invasion plans.

The low-flying daylight attack on troops entrenched near the beach was the fourth in succession by British bombers and fighters, and it was coupled with night bombing of Brest, Le Havre and Lorient and the reported firing of oil storage and processing plants in Porto Marghera, Italy, near Venice; Regensburg, Germany, and Ostend, Belgium.

The British Press Association commented, "it is significant that, since the first daylight raids upon the airdromes nearest our shores, the enemy's night attacks have been of briefer duration."

(German building of defense fortifications along the Channel Coast, armed with powerful, French guns seized in the Maginot Line, has been reported recently by British military circles.)

The air ministry gave a picture of devastation in the raid on Porto Marghera, where it said one large building "blew up" and another fell to pieces.

Oil storage tanks were set aflame, it said, sheds and workshops were "machine-gunned from almost ground level" and "the target was left burning."

British bombers attacked dockyards there for an hour, the ministry said, and set them "alight from end t oend." The fires could be seen clearly, it added, "when our bombers were back over the French Alps."

It said Regensberg, Danubian port where oil from Rumania is refined and stored, was attacked for the second time. Returning pilots said bombs collapsed the boiler house of one factory and set off flames which seemed to come from "an enormous explosion."

"Sea level" attacks on Nazi naval forces, an air ministry said, swept the decks of two torpedoboats 800 yards off the French coast, a large schooner and other vessels.

Authoritative sources also reported direct hits on two merchant vessels off the Norwegian coast.

Three factors, British sources contended, give the Royal Air Force supremacy over the Luftwaffe.

They are continuous, systematic bombing of German industry and communications, a slight advantage over German planes in altitude and an increased flow from British and American factories.

Four types of United States-built planes are being or soon will be flown across the Atlantic to Britain, it was announced officially. They are the Lockheed-Hudson long-range reconnaisance bomber for the R. A. F.'s coastal command; the Lockheed-Ventura bomber, described as "a larger and faster version" of the Lockheed-Hudson; the Boeing B-17 four-engined bomber, and the consolidated two-engined flying boat.

first to be tackled when the committee meets to organize.

Senator Reynolds, who previously had placed traffic high on his program for committee consideration, said that he would cooperate gladly with the House District Committee in any inquiry that may be undertaken.

He indicated that the investigation would be expedited by joint action of the Senate and House committees, but pointed out that subcommittees could operate more effectively.

"What the people of Washington want is action," he said. "They've heard enough talking about traffic. They want something done about it."

Reynolds concurred with Representative Dirksen that some sound engineering studies and proposals, rather than a mere airing of complaints, is needed.

Representative Schulte, who was chairman of the subcommittee on traffic in the last Congress, said he is "100 per cent" for an inquiry. He suggested that express highways should be built over the city to eliminate traffic "bottlenecks."

British Destroy Italian Warship

tack on a heavily-escorted British convoy between Sicily and Africa. No mention was made of an Italian destroyer sunk.

(The Germans claimed to have bombed two British warships, one of them an aircraft carrier, but it was not clear whether the Italian and German claims overlapped.)

As soon as the first thin streak of gray showed in the Eastern sky this morning a starshell burst ahead of us. It was from a British cruiser which had spotted two Italian destroyers.

British cruisers and destroyers raced after the enemy, which showed plenty of speed. One of the Italian vessels slipped away. The other one was caught in the withering fire of the British warships.

Two cruisers hurled shells into the vitals of the Italian ship, crippling her beyond hope. A British destroyer raced alongside and finished the job.

From the stricken destroyer burst a hug column of steam, smoke and water, visible 10 miles away, indicating that her boilers had exploded. She sank almost immediately, presumably with all hands, although some of the crew may have reached the coast a few miles distant.

The Italian vessel fought with courage and determination but must have known she was doomed from the start.

The first retaliation to this brief naval battle, under the noses of silent Italian coast defense guns, came a few minutes after 11 a. m., when British aircraft spotted enemy planes approaching and chased them off.

An hour later two Italian torpedo-carrying bombers flew out of the sun and were met by a blasting anti-aircraft barrage. One dropped a torpedo, which passed across the stern of this ship and finally sank harmlessly. The other plane retained its load and both then turned tail and disappeared.

Then came German dive bombers about 8,000 feet overhead. They broke up into groups of three, pointed their noses down and raced for their targets with wide-open throttles.

They were met by a barrage of thousands of shells but maneuvered to let go their deadly cargoes. They pulled up in some cases less than 100 feet from the water, it seemed to us. Then they reformed and carried out another dive in the same expert fashion.

Fifteen dive bombers participated. None was seen to fall into the sea.

British fighters later intercepted an enemy squadron and shot down an unannounced number.

At 6 p. m. the dive bombers revisited us, but this time there were only 11 planes. They appeared to be the same squadron that had attacked previously.

In this raid the Germans introduced a new feature. The dive bombers leveled off at a dangerously low height—once not more than 10 feet above the water—and flew for several miles like stunt fliers "hedge-hopping." The British at first believed the planes had been hit and were about to plunge into the water, only to see them rise again for another dive attack. The device apparently was used to escape British fire.

The attacks undoubtedly constituted the heaviest air raid with which the British fleet in the Mediterranean had had to cope since the beginning of hostilities. It was carried out with reckless courage which left no doubt that the pilots had been hand-picked for an obvious attempt to scare the British out of the western Mediterranean.

Italian pilots at no time have attempted such an attack, not for lack of courage, perhaps, but more likely because they have no planes able to do such dive-bombing.

Britsh Claim Air Rule Over Third of Libya

R. A. F. Uses Fields Abandoned by Italians For Tobruk Attack

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 13.—Royal Air Force squadrons ranging far ahead of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's land forces have gained control of the air as far as Bengasi, or over a third of Italy's North Africa colony, British sources said tonight.

A string of airdromes and landing fields in the vicinity of beleaguered Tobruk were abandoned so speedily by the Italians that they had no time to destroy them, the British said.

R. A. F. fliers were said already to be using these fields as bases for heavy attacks on Tobruk, like those credited with playing a major role in the fall of Bardia.

The British say that Gen. Wavell's land forces are massing around the port of Tobruk with little or no harassment from the air.

British bombers are said to have carried on large-scale day and night attacks on Benina, large air supply base outside Bengasi, 280 miles west of the Egyptian frontier. A large number of aircraft on the ground at Benina were reported to have been set afire or destroyed.

From Bengasi, eastward to Bardia and south 150 miles to the oasis of Giarabub, the British claimed air domination.

It is only a question of time, they said, until Giarabub falls. They added that it has escaped bombing by the R. A. F. in deference to the Senussi sect of Moslems, whose sacred relics are there.

To date, the British claim they have destroyed 560 Italian aircraft in Africa, against a loss of fewer than 100.

British forces, in collaboration with those of former Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, continued guerrilla warfare on Italian columns across the Egyptian Sudan-Ethiopian frontier.

Haile Selassie, at Khartoum, was quoted as predicting that "the time is not far distant" when he would lead an army of Ethiopians against the Italians.

A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch said that the little "Lion of Judah," sitting on a wooden throne covered with purple silk, reviewed his small army being trained and armed by the British.

Turkey Accepts Stand

Ankara, Turkey, Jan. 13 (AP).—Turkey's official radio and press today accepted Bulgarian Premier Philoff's desire for neutrality as expressed in an address yesterday as proof that he did not commit Bulgaria to a new pro-German policy in the Balkans.

Meanwhile, staff officers of Britain's Middle East command arrived for military discussions beginning tomorrow which observers said might affect the course of the war in the Mediterranean, the Balkans, and Africa.

Two Traffic Death Inquests Set Today

Inquests were scheduled by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald for 11:30 a. m. today at the District Morgue in the deaths of two 1940 traffic victims.

One was Marie Schwertner, 70, of the 200 block of Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, the District's seventy-sixth traffic fatality last year, who was struck December 22. The other was Harry J. Bender, 73, 1016 Douglas Street Northeast, struck December 26.

Nazis Apply New Pressure On Bulgaria

By the Associated Press

Sofia, Bulgaria, Jan. 13.—Germany renewed diplomatic activity here tonight amid indications of a stronger Russian stand against possible transit of German troops through Bulgaria for an attack on Greece or the Dardinelles.

The German Minister, Baron von Richtofen, called on Premier Philoff and Foreign Minister Popoff in conferences considered important in the wake of the denial by Tass, official Russian news agency, that the Soviet had given consent to German entry into Bulgaria.

German circles hinted that Philoff and Richtofen might shortly go to Berlin together.

Meanwhile, Bulgaria and Russia opened negotiations for renewal of their 1940 trade treaty involving goods valued at $10,000,000.

Significant Conference

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Budapest radio in a broadcast heard here tonight said Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu had a "very long" and "significant" conference today with German Ambassador Von Papen at Ankara. No details were given.

Britain to Sell Assets in U. S. To Buy Arms

Investment Firms Are Negotiating $850,000,000 Deal

By Irving Perlmeter
Associated Press Staff Writer

One of the largest lump transfers of American property in history was indicated yesterday in an announcement by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau that American investment trusts were negotiating for the purchase of the United Kingdom's "direct" investments in the United States.

A few minutes before the disclosure at a press conference, the Secretary said Sir Frederick Phillips, undersecretary of the British treasury, "informed me they (the British government) are ready to do business." The proceeds, the Secretary said, will be used to pay for war purchases before the lease-lending plan takes effect.

Morgenthau said he was unable to estimate the amount of property involved, but a recent Federal Reserve Board estimate of these assets was $850,000,000.

Thus it was indicated that the contemplated deal, while it might be huge, would cover only a part of the total British investments in this country, which have been variously estimated at from $4,000,000,000 to $7,000,000,000 or even more.

"Direct" investments were understood to comprise land, factories, etc., directly owned by British citizens, but not readily negotiable on the public markets. In addition to the possible sale of these investments, the British have been selling readily disposable securities in a comparatively small but steady stream.

Some legislators have demanded that Britain dispose of all her assets here before seeking loans. Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, said today that he had been advised by Harry L. Hopkins last summer that British assets here aggregated $14,000,000,000 then. Wheeler said these assets now total at least $7,000,000,000, and added that Britain should exhaust her credit before asking any "loans, leased equipment or gifts."

Morgenthau said he had already given Sir Frederick the name of Cyril Quinn, of New York, the representative of one "very large group of investment trusts." He said a second group of investment companies was to see him today, and also would be introduced to the British, and that any other groups interested in the purchase also were welcome.

Second Group Here Today

David Schencker, head of the Securities Commission's investment trust division, who has participated in the Quinn-Morgenthau conferences, said Quinn was chairman of the Tri-Continental Corporation, which was the leader of the first group of companies. He said he understood that the second group, which will see Morgenthau today, is headed by the Lehman Corporation of New York.

Schencker quoted Quinn as saying that he had 15 companies lined up with him, and that they had total assets of nearly $700,000,000.

Morgenthau and Schencker did not exclude the possibility that the investment trusts might buy some of the readily marketable securities now owned by the British, but said that since the sale of these securities presented no particular difficulties, discussions had been centered on "direct" investments.

Although saying the Administration "has no fixed policy" on the question of requiring the British to dispose of American investments before taking advantage of President Roosevelt's "lease-lending" bill in order to obtain munitions in this country, the Secretary said his actions yesterday "speak louder than any comments."

The Secretary said yesterday's negotiations dealt only with investments held in the United Kingdom, and did not apply to the rest of the British Empire, where at least $1,000,000,000 more American property is owned.

Store Stock Sold

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—A block of 80,000 shares of common stock of Montgomery Ward & Co. was sold "over the counter" after the close of the New York Stock Exchange today in what brokerage circles said was a continuation of British liquidation of American securities to raise dollar exchange for war purchases.

The Montgomery Ward stock, worth about $3,120,000 at current market quotations, was offered by the investment firms of Dominick & Dominick and Lehman Bros., at $39 a share, the closing price on the exchange.

Other houses were reported planning to sell later in the week 40,000 shares of Union Pacific and 50,000 shares of F. W. Woolworth in the speed-up of British sales.

Food Industry Acts for Price Stabilization

Nelson Tells of Plans To Keep Down Costs For Armed Forces

Donald M. Nelson, director of the Division of Purchases of the Office of Production Management, announced yesterday that the food industry had adopted a four-point program designed to stabilize food prices to the public and to protect the Government from excessive costs in feeding the armed forces.

The agreement calls for:

"1. Continuance of competitive bidding as the basic procurement policy;

"2. Eligibility of any responsible vendor to submit bids;

"3. Purchase of supplies so far as possible in carload lots, f. o. b. destination point. This may well serve to equalize Army business among suppliers in all parts of the country;

"4. Inspection of all goods at the point of origin. Such a system would avoid the difficulties of delays, returns, and unnecessary claims."

Hector Lazo, chairman of the Food Procurement Advisory Committee, said that success of the defense program "calls for united effort of all factors in the food industry and for wholehearted cooperation to accomplish the great task of feeding the military forces and at the same time safeguarding the scale of living of all Americans."

Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau said at his press conference that he had been alarmed by what he called "unwarranted rises in the prices of lumber, scrap iron and wool, but that Leon Henderson, member of the National Defense Commission had been doing a "grand job" in handling the price situation.

The Treasury head added that the danger of price inflation necessitated "every agency of the Government watching the situation every minute of the time."

Former Premier Chautemps Here on 'Forced Vacation'

Four-Time Head of French Republic Is Noncommittal on Its Downfall; He Calls Petain 'a Friend in Accord'

Camille Chautemps, four times premier and 18 times vice premier of France, sipped port wine at the Wardman Park Hotel yesterday and talked about his family.

CHAUTEMPS

Behind a rapid stream of French, a pleasant smile and exact gestures he hid all he knows about the downfall of the French Republic and all he surmises about the future of his people.

"I am an old and sincere friend of the United States," he said, "and I am in this country to demonstrate that the French people are friends of the Americans. Politics gave me a forced vacation. So I took advantage of it."

Questioned on the effect on the French people of a declaration of Great Britain's war aims now, Chautemps replied:

"If England had made a promise of the reestablishment of the French nation at the armistice, the French people would be much more interested in a declaration by England now."

Each time a politically pertinent question was asked, Chautemps evaded with many statements on the beauty of Washington and his pleasure at being here with his family.

Besides his wife, he is accompanied by his four children: Gisell, 15; Jean Pierre, 11; Jean Louis, 4, and Antoinette, 7 months, "the war baby."

While his concern at the condition of his country is written on Chautemps' face, for the press he prefers to talk about the condition of Antoinette, who is suffering from a slight cold.

Chautemps and his family are here in agreement with Marshal Petain, "a friend in accord."

The former premier is armed with no letters and without official status. He does not know how long he may stay.

"This is a beautiful country. There are many things to see in it," he said.

Langer Charges Held Insufficient By Senate Group

A Senate Privileges and Elections Subcommittee decided yesterday that charges contained in a protest against the seating of Senator Langer (Republican), North Dakota, were "not sufficient" and recommended giving the protestants ten days in which to file additional evidence.

The subcommittee, headed by Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, reached its decision after studying a protest filed by C. R. Verry, of Minot, and seven other North Dakotans. The protest accused Langer of misuse of absent voters' ballots and other acts in conflict with election laws.

British Report Willkie Pledge Of 'Limit' Aid

London Paper Prints Interview Obtained By Transatlantic Phone

By International News Service

London (Tuesday), Jan. 14.—Wendell L. Willkie promised to support American aid to Britain to the "very limit" in a transatlantic telephonic interview with the London Daily Express, published today.

The Republican Party leader, who is about to cross the Atlantic by plane to visit Britain, told the Express that in his opinion the "overwhelming mass" of the American people—90 per cent of them—favor, as he does, American assistance to Britain "all the way."

Speaking from his breakfast table in New York to an Express reporter in London, Willkie revealed that during his forthcoming journey he "may go to France, but certainly not to Germany."

Saying that he is going to visit Britain "for the ordinary reason that I want to find out things for myself," Willkie was further quoted by the Express as declaring:

"To begin with, there is no doubt that the democracies are going to win. Ninety per cent of the people of this great democracy (the United States) are in favor of aiding Britain to the very limit."

Asked whether he meant to the very limit, even if British payment for aid received is deferred, Willkie replied, according to the Express:

"To the very limit. That is my judgment."

He was asked whether he thought that represented the view of the American "man in the street." The Express quoted him as answering:

"I am not presumptious one way or the other. I always go on the basis of expressing my own views, regardless of what anyone else may think. I don't trim to what any movement may think.

"But I do know that the overwhelming mass of opinion here is for backing you all the way."

[Reached by telephone at his New York apartment last night by The Washington Post, Willkie declined to say for publication whether he was quoted correctly in the Daily Express interview. He intimated, however, that the British interviewer misunderstood him if it was implied that by the phrase "aid to the very limit" Willkie meant United States' participation in the war.—Editor's note.]

"What am I going to do with the information I collect in Britain?

"I shall write and speak all over my country for you."

Asked if the United States might eventually be threatened with invasion, Willkie was quoted as replying:

"No. Our danger is much greater. "Personally, I think that the economic danger is the greatest danger for us—far greater than the military danger."

Mrs. Willkie then picked up the telephone and, replying to a question as to how American women feel about Britain, said:

"We are all for Britain. Britain must and will win."

Nazis See Signs of U. S. Anxiety

'Cinderella,' 6, Who Never Saw A Movie, Is Actress Now

Tired of Filmland 'Brats,' Director Finds Her in Children's Home

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, Jan. 13.—The fairy queen touched Cinderella with her wand . . .

So today 6-year-old Arlene Jackson, who has never seen a movie, becomes a movie actress.

Last week Arlene was playing in a children's home while her mother worked all day at a factory. Today she has a private dressing room, a stand-in, a wardrobe mistress and a hairdresser. Most important, she has an income of $25 a day.

It all started when Director George Stevens, trying to cast a child for an orphan's part, remarked after two days of interviews:

"I'm sick and tired of affected Hollywood brats. Let's go hunting for someone new."

Where better, reasoned Stevens, could he find a child to play an orphan's role than in an orphanage. He and Martha Cheavens, author of the screen play, set out. They visited most of the city's orphanages without success, then stopped in at the Children's Home.

"Do you know any recitations?" Stevens inquired as Arlene was brought in.

"I know the story of the Three Wise Men," she replied. The director and the writer listened as she told it, without once hesitating.

"She's the one," Miss Cheavens said, as Arlene finished. Stevens agreed.

Next morning, a limousine stopped before the home. A chauffeur and a welfare worker took Arlene to the studio for wardrobe fittings and a screen test. She came through like a veteran.

Until she met Cary Grant and Irene Dunn, who play her parents in "Penny Serenade," she never had seen a movie star. But not a moment's nervousness did she show.

Then the "fairy queen," Miss Cheavens, took her to lunch. Ice cream pie topped it off.

"That was nice," Arlene told her. "I never tasted any before."

French Freighter Again Fails to Run British Blockade

Montevideo, Jan. 13 (AP).—The 8,000-ton French freighter Mendoza was reported steaming back to Montevideo tonight from an apparently frustrated second attempt to run home through the British blockade.

The British auxiliary cruiser Asturias, which stopped the Mendoza last night, had been reported lying outside the mouth of the River Plate, ready to give pursuit again after the ship sailed at noon with a cargo of meat and wool.

Uruguayan Foreign Minister Guani protested to Britain against the halting of the Mendoza within the Pan-American neutrality zone.

British officials said the Mendoza's representatives had not asked for a navicert, the naval certificate which would let her pass the blockade.

Grand Jury to Report

The new grand jury will make its first report to the District Court today. The jurors, sworn in last Wednesday, have considered about 20 cases.

March-of-Dimes Leaders to Speak

Three Arlington County (Va.) leaders of the March of Dimes drive opening tomorrow will speak tonight in a broadcast from 9 to 9:15 over Station WOL.

The speakers will be F. R. Rice, past commander of the Arlington Post of the American Legion, who is chairman of the March of Dimes drive; Chester Sipes, commander of the John Lyon Post, V. F. W., vice chairman of the drive, and Margaret Troxell, president of the county's Business and Professional Women's Club, vice chairman of the drive.

Bayreuth Bombed In British Raids On South Germany

Berlin, Jan. 13 (AP).—British raiders bombed Bayreuth, scene of the annual Wagner music festival, and other places early today in southern Germany and the Luftwaffe carried out overnight fire-setting raids on London and the English south coast, the high command reported.

Today's communique said only that the British dropped "some bombs," but authoritative quarters said the damage they did was minor. The Bayreuth festival house and the villa, where Richard Wagner is buried, were said to be untouched.

(The British apparently were aiming at rail facilities in Bayreuth, a junction 125 miles north of Munich.)

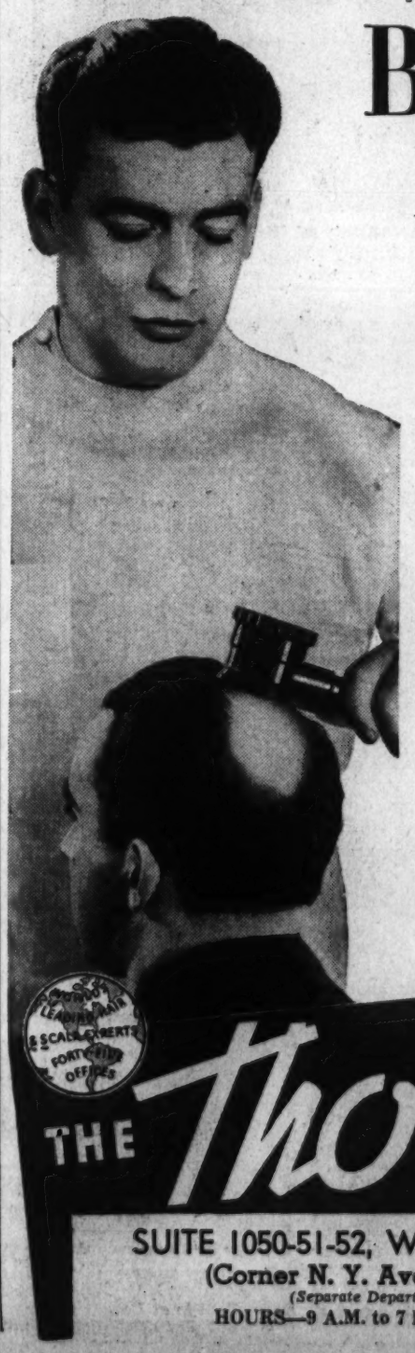
Does Dandruff Cause Baldness?



THREE Major scalp ills, defined by specialists as types of dandruff, are said to cause more than 80% of all cases of baldness. Dandruff is, therefore, definitely a serious local scalp ailment which will lead to baldness unless given highly specialized attention.

Haphazard or cure-all treatment rarely overcomes dandruff. To combat it effectively you must first determine which type of dandruff is attacking your hair-growing structure, and then direct treatment to specifically overcome that particular type. Thomas treatment does precisely this!

How to Avoid Baldness

Thomas experts know how to recognize and effectively treat the three types of dandruff as well as various other local scalp troubles which cause baldness. Thomas treatment definitely combats your dandruff, checks abnormal hair-fall, and promotes natural hair growth for you.

More than a quarter million persons have ended scalp troubles by The Thomas' method. Thomas can help you, too, to have a good head of hair. Come in person today to the nearest Thomas office. No charge is ever made for scalp examination, advice, or consultation (always in private).

College Editors Question Dykstra; Learn Students Face Camp Life, Too

DYKSTRA RELAXED, ANSWERED STUDENT EDITORS' QUESTIONS

LEWIS RILEY, of Intercollegiate Washington Press, sat nearest Dykstra, asked most questions

Deferment of students eligible for military training will not be granted unless specifically requested, Selective Service Director Clarence A. Dykstra told a group of college newspaper editors at a press conference yesterday.

Director Dykstra pointed out the act provided that students' service should be deferred on request until July, 1941. In the absence of a request for deferment, he said, students would be sent to camp without delay.

This was the major point that Dr. Dykstra asked the collegiate journalists to take back with them to their respective schools.

Dr. Dykstra avoided expressing his opinion on whether the age limit for selects should be lowered to 18 and on whether girls should be given some role in the selective service training program.

The conference—first of its kind to be held by Dr. Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin—was attended by the following: William J. Bowen, Gallaudet College; Daniel Sullivan, Gonzaga College; Mary Butler, Trinity College; Abe Simon, George Washington University; Dorothy Folsom, Washington College of Law; Gerald Raskopf, Georgetown University; Virginia Moss and Marian Freeman, both of Miner Teachers College; Joseph M. Mathias, Southeastern University; Lewis Riley, Intercollegiate Washington Press Association, and John Darnell, National Student Federation.

Manhattan Stuck to Bar

The palatial United States liner Manhattan remained fast on a sand bar, 250 yards off the Florida coast, near West Palm Beach, yesterday as Coast Guardsmen began to remove the ship's 199 passengers. Spectators on the shore, in planes and boats watched futile efforts to refloat her. The rescue was just a lark to most of the passengers. Supreme Court Upholds Two Spy Sentences

Pair Was Convicted Of Obtaining U. S. Secrets for Russia

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Under a broad interpretation of the World War Espionage Act, the Supreme Court yesterday upheld the conviction of a Russian citizen and a Russian-born American for obtaining secret information for the U. S. S. R.

The two men had allegedly acquired data on the movements of Japanese officials and civilians on the West Coast and in Mexico from the files of the Naval Intelligence Service in San Pedro, Calif.

One, Hafis Salich, a naturalized citizen, was a civilian investigator for Naval Intelligence and therefore had access to the files; while the other, Mikhail Nicholas Gorin, was Los Angeles representative of the Soviet tourist agency.

Salich was accused of selling the information for $1,700 to Gorin, allegedly an agent of the Russian government. The men received prison terms of four and six years and were fined $10,000 each.

Constitutionality Upheld

In his opinion, agreed to unanimously by the court (Justice Murphy not participating), Justice Reed swept aside the contention that the Espionage Act was unconstitutional as violative of "due process" because of the indefiniteness" of its terms.

"We find no uncertainty in this statute which deprives a person of the ability to predertermine whether a contemplated action is criminal under the provisions of this law," said the court. "The language employed appears sufficiently definite to apprise the public of prohibited activities and is consonant with due process."

The court ponted out that the purloined reports "gave a detailed picture of the counter-espionage work of the Naval Intelligence, drawn from its own files."

A foreign government in possession of this information would be in a position to use it either for itself, in following the movements of the agents reported upon, or as a check upon this country's efficiency in ferreting out foreign espionage," said Justice Reed.

Labor Board Wins

The National Labor Relations Board maintained its high record for judicial victories yesterday when the court refused to review three cases which the Labor Board had won before lower tribunals. They involved the Sunshine Mining Co., the Viking Pump Co. and the Stewart Die Casting Corporation. In the Stewart case, the board had ordered the company to reinstate some employes who had engaged in a sit-down strike.

A fourth Labor Board case, involving the Phelps Dodge copper mine in Bisbee, Ariz., was granted review by the Supreme Court. The case raises the question of the Labor Board's power to order reinstatement and back pay for workers whom the company purportedly refused to reemploy because of union activities.

In a 5-to-4 opinion—with New Deal Justices Frankfurter, Black, Douglas and Murphy dissenting—the court held that a physical examination can be ordered by a Federal court if the question of physical condition is in controversy. However, it ruled that a person refusing the examination cannot be punished for contempt.

Stockyard Case to Be Reviewed

In another case, the court held that a reimbursement clause in a contract between the Government and the Cowden Manufacturing Co., of Kansas City, Mo., did not require the Government to repay the company for processing taxes levied on subcontractors but ultimately paid for by Cowden.

The Supreme Court agreed to allow the Kansas City stockyard case to come before it for the fourth time. It granted review to the lower court decision invalidating an orde: of Henry A. Wallace when he was Secretary of Agriculture reducing maximum fees allowed commission agents at the stockyards between 1933 and 1937.

The court refused to review a decision requiring a Pittsburgh contracting firm to pay $108,000 in taxes to West Virginia for work done there for the Federal Government in 1932 and 1933.

Two 'Thrill' Bandits Serving Life for Murder Win Pardons

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MOTHER'S KISS—Richard Gray Gallogly's mother, Mrs. Worth E. Yankey (left), was waiting with a kiss for her son when Georgia's Gov. Rivers pardoned him yesterday from a life term in Atlanta Prison for the holdup-killing of a drug clerk in 1928. His wife, Mrs. Vera Hunt Gallogly (right), was happy once again

By the United Press

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 13.—Richard Gallogly and George Harsh, scions of wealthy families and the two most publicized convicts in Georgia for more than a decade, today were granted pardons by Gov. E. D. Rivers from life sentences for murder.

Gallogly, dressed in prison khaki and denim, was brought from Georgia's Tattnall prison and personally pleaded for freedom. Also present were Gallogly's attractive blonde wife, the former Vera Hunt, whom he married two years ago while he was a convict, and his mother, Mrs. Worth Yankey, a member of the wealthy Gray family that owned the Atlanta Journal until it was sold a year ago.

Gallogly and Harsh pleaded guilty in 1928 to murder of a store clerk in a holdup while they were students at Oglethorpe University, Atlanta. They admitted holding up several Atlanta stores for the "thrill." Two clerks were fatally shot in the robberies.

Rivers, in his last day as Governor, said he was "closing the book" on the cases, which had been a political issue in Georgia for 12 years. He added:

"I hope I am doing right."

Whiteside Named Commercial Plane Priorities Chief

Arthur B. Whiteside, former member of the National Industrial Recovery Board, has been appointed executive officer of a new section in the Office of Production Management's priorities division concerned with the controversial subject of commercial aircraft production, it was announced yesterday.

Whiteside is on leave as president of the New York credit reporting firm of Dun & Bradstreet. E. R. Stettinius, jr., director of the priorities division, said Whiteside would also serve as member of the Commercial Aircraft Priorities Committee, which will act as advisers to the commercial aircraft section. The latter body will continue similar work under the former Priorities Board of the Defense Commission.

It is believed that the work of the new section will be complicated by the known dissatisfaction of commercial airline interests whose planned expansion was vetoed by recent defense rulings giving military aircraft requirements first call on all production.

District Influenza

That the District Health Department may have to meet an extraordinary test this year is forecast by the report that in the first 11 days of 1941 there have been reported here 155 cases of influenza, or far more than in the whole month of January, 1940. Health Officer George C. Ruhland probably is right in saying that part of the increase is due to more comprehensive reporting. Nevertheless, with the Nation undergoing an epidemic that already has reached the largest proportions in nearly a decade, it is only logical to expect a rise in the local incidence of influenza. The first concrete effects are brought to notice by Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown, who finds the situation becoming "serious," with some 8 per cent of his force absent on account of illness.

Moreover, although State and District authorities caution against unnecessary alarm from the present mild form of influenza, an epidemic is developing rapidly next door to Washington. From many parts of Virginia reports of local outbreaks are coming in. At Roanoke it is estimated that 15 per cent of the population is affected; at Radford, 30 per cent of the school enrollment is out; at Newport News a thousand pupils and 15 teachers are absent: at Danville, with 2,295 pupils and 30 teachers absent, the schools have been closed; at Pennington Gap, the Mayor said half the townspeople were stricken; and the superintendent of a coal corporation in the St. Charles field said the epidemic had affected 60 per cent of his workmen and their families.

The need for surveys of medical, hospital and nursing facilities such as those undertaken in Virginia and the District is freshly underlined by a statement in the Virginia Medical Monthly. An editorial in that magazine, which is the organ of the State's medical society, charges that Richmond, generally regarded as a model medical city, faces a shortage of hospital beds. Many other communities, unknown to their people, may be in the same condition. They must take stock of normal facilities, and look for emergency resources for use in case a pandemic should follow the present mild form of influenza, as it did a quarter-century ago.

Okaying The Aid

Some of our legislators wish to put in the lend-lease bill the existing proviso (which would otherwise be nullified) endowing the Chief of Staff or the Chief of Naval Operations with responsibility for determining the disposal to Britain of our defense establishment. The suggestion as it stands is unfair to those officers. As Maj. George Fielding Eliot, writing in Sunday's New York Herald Tribune, says, "Like all officers of the armed forces, they are subject to the authority of the President as constitutionally designated Commander in Chief: their opinions cannot properly be set up as direct checks on the President, however much he may, in practice, feel himself bound to be guided by their advice."

Maj. Eliot's point is made in connection with a proposal which had already been advanced in this newspaper, namely, the setting up of a Committee of National Defense. Such a committee would be responsible for working out the strategy of our national policy. It would be consultative, not policy-making; in short, it would complement the Advisory Commission. And on such a committee would sit the service chiefs of the service departments, as well as Cabinet heads who are directly concerned in one way or another with the national strategy.

Now it is conceivable that such an elevation in status for the service chiefs would change their approach completely. As a Navy officer a chief of naval operations might be loath to lose some of his establishment. However, as a general tactician, helping to operate a national policy, he might look upon such a loss in terms of accomplishing the policy. In no other circumstances, at any rate, should the existing provision for the service chiefs' OK on disposals to Britain be retained. A committee would allay the qualms of the legislators more than handsomely. For, as Maj. Eliot says, "the very fact of its formal existence, for its acknowledged right to be heard and to advise, would reassure the country, and would add greatly to the Presidential authority to act with vigor in present and future emergencies."

Word To The Wise

Berlin reactions to the President's program for all-out moral and material aid for Britain follows a ritual the hollowness of which is already written in the experience of seven countries. The ritual begins with an exclamation of pain that anybody should dream of thinking that Hitler entertains aggressive designs. And it winds up with a tu quoque. Since Hitler is so pure, the accuser himself must be a sinister fellow, and, ergo, he is the man to watch for aggression. Mr. Roosevelt thus finds his accusation thrown back in his face, and he is called Warmonger No. 1.

It is not necessary to argue with the ritual while the record remains handy. But the record deserves repetition for the benefit of those whose memories are short or whose trust is blind. Here are the protestations of Adolf Hitler since 1933:

"The German people have no thought of invading any country."—Berlin, May 17, 1933.

"We have no territorial demands to make in Europe."—Berlin, March 7, 1936.

"Germany has neither the wish nor the intention to mix in internal Austrian affairs or annex or unite with Austria."—Reichstag, May 21, 1935.

"We want to live our own life, and we want other people to do the same. . . . We have assured all our immediate neighbors of the integrity of their territory as far as Germany is concerned. That is no hollow phrase; it is our sacred will."—Berlin, September 26, 1938.

"We succeeded in arriving at an agreement [with Poland] which, for the duration of ten years, basically removes the danger of any clash. . . . We are two peoples. They shall live. One cannot annihilate the other."—Sportspalast, September 26, 1938.

"I will not war against women and children. I have ordered my air force to restrict itself to attacks on military objectives."—Berlin, September 1, 1939.

"The German Reich and the Kingdom of Denmark will under no circumstances resort to war or any other form of violence against each other." Article I of pact signed in Berlin, May 31, 1939.

"In the spirit long existing of good German-Norwegian relations the Reich government notifies the Norwegian government that she has no intention, through her measures now or in the future, of infringing upon the territorial integrity or the political independence of the Kingdom of Norway."—Berlin, April 9, 1940.

"We are ready to acknowledge and guarantee these states [the Low Countries] at all times as inviolable neutral territory."—Reichstag, January 30, 1937.

What happened on the heels of these protestations is familiar enough without description. What was said and what actually occurred are sufficient guides as to Hitler's bona fides. For the lowdown on his ambitions a re-reading is commended of Hermann Rauschning's "Voice Of Destruction." The authenticity of Rauschning's report on Hitler's conversations has been attested by everything that has happened in Europe. It is thus a blueprint for future designs. Here is what Hitler told Rauschning about America: "I guarantee that at the right moment a new America will exist as our strongest supporter when we are ready to take the stride into the overseas space." Only a change in regime, accordingly, could reinstate any faith in assurances from Berlin or persuade the world that there are any limits to Germanic ambitions. An apparent change of heart should suffice only to double our watch and extend our defenses.

Italy's Command

Benito Mussolini, for the second time in little more than two months, has found it necessary to carry out a drastic shake-up in the Fascist high command. This time the axe has fallen on Gen. Ubaldo Soddu to whom on November 10 was entrusted the thankless job of reorganizing the shattered Italian lines in Albania. He is to be replaced by Gen. Ugo Cavallero, who replaced Marshal Pietro Badoglio as chief of staff last month.

According to the official announcement, Gen. Soddu "has been relieved because of his health." We can well believe that. Any Italian's health would suffer from the spectacle of the way Mussolini's legions have been routed by a numerically inferior force of Greeks. For a time Soddu did succeed in holding up the Greek advance, though most of the credit must go to that indiscriminately hostile warrior, Gen. Winter. But last week the Greeks won another striking victory with the capture of Klisura, which they have since followed up by an advance on Tepelini, a town commanding the road to Valona. Thus the threat to Valona becomes increasingly real, and, should the Italians have to abandon that strategically vital port, which overlooks the Strait of Otranto, the Italian plight, in Albania, as in Libya, would be extreme.

It may be that Gen. Cavallero will be able to succeed where Gen. Soddu failed, especially with German help. Some of the German divisions rumored to have crossed the Brenner into Italy may be put into action in Albania, though of that there is still no certainty. In the meantime the Greeks continue their advance over the primitive roads and snow-filled passes of Albania to write new chapters in an epic of valor which has aroused the admiration of the world.

Control By Persuasion

Leon Henderson, head of the price stabilization division of the Defense Commission, is making a valiant and so far successful attempt to prevent unwarranted increases in the prices of defense materials, as an alternative to direct compulsion.

Till recently he and his aides have been chiefly engaged in prevention only. But in the case of steel scrap the price-fixing division was confronted by the more difficult task of trying to bring down prices that had already advanced to unreasonably high levels. Warning went forth from Defense Commissioner Henderson last week, accordingly, that "drastic steps looking toward control of iron and steel scrap prices would be recommended unless the industry made a voluntary reduction of at least several dollars per ton on future sales." This announcement was followed by a considerable drop in scrap quotations, although prices have not yet fallen to the desired level.

The warning to the scrap steel industry to cooperate or face loss of control over its own activities indicates that the old-fashioned freedom for industry has already vanished as a result of the defense emergency. But persuasion, backed by the threat of force, is infinitely preferable to direct action, assuming that our industrialists are ready to cooperate with the Government.

Sing, Boys, Sing!

It would appear from the comments that the choruses such as the Australians sang while bursting into Bardia are regarded as essential in spurring an army in an attack. In point of fact, they are of far more value in sustaining morale between attacks. At rest or on the march troops need inspiriting songs to while away idle moments, to keep up camaraderie, or to take a man's mind off his aching feet or strained back. Serving this purpose in the last war were "Tipperary," "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kitbag," "Over There," "Madelon," and the endless jingle about the young lady from Armentieres. But they weren't as rollicking as some of the new choruses. "Roll Out the Barrel," for instance, has probably added several miles to many a British soldier's per diem marching ability, while the main chorus in "The Wizard of Oz," which the "Aussies" sang at Bardia, is equally rousing. These and other tunes, you will notice, are non-British compositions, a fact which, for one thing, shows that the British haven't been very productive in this essential equipment for their armies. As for the Germans, they were all ready for this war with a marching song, as they were in other respects. It is called "I Have a Girl Called Erika," and it quickly caught on elsewhere with other words. But, except at Bardia, soldiers don't often sing in battle, though shouts, rehearsed or otherwise, are apt to rend the smoke-filled air along with the shriek of shot and shell, especially if there has been a liberal rum ration just before zero hour.

Steady, Senator!

In a recent speech Senator Burton K. Wheeler suggested as one provision in his proposed peace plan that Germany be vouchsafed her 1914 frontiers with Poland and Czecho-Slovakia given full autonomy. It happens, of course, that only a part, and only the very much smaller part, of Poland had ever been incorporated in the German Reich, and that at no time had Czecho-Slovakia been part of that nation. But, having cavalierly disregarded the political geography of Europe, the learned Senator from Montana finds it a relatively simple matter to rewrite that troubled continent's history. In his American Forum of the Air discussion on Sunday he declared that "the Kaiser's blank check to Serbia in the first World War was a piker—compared to the Roosevelt blank check of World War II." Serbia, Senator, Serbia?

WAVE

The wave of time rises
And from the crest,
In the foam's white flower,
We see the exploding bubble
Of the hour.
The wave of time
Has no familiar shore,
But the embroidered land,
The salt sea's barren sand
Have known that wave before.
The wave of time returns
And no one knows the moon
Whose silver shadow wakes
From noon the sleeping wave;
Nor where, nor when it breaks
Like jade that bends to frost,
And is forever lost.

British Heritage

I advise one of your letter writers to take a trip on the other side of the Hudson before again making the assertion that Americanism exists at its purest in the Prairie States, where he says the people are not "fooled" by Britain.

Being born and bred in a purely pioneer community on the Pacific Coast, where Revolutionary descent and Revolutionary tradition colored our thinking, I was brought up to revere the social institutions and standards of conduct that were our British heritage. Our speakers at patriotic celebrations like the Fourth of July used to praise this inheritance and to speak of Britain as the mother country. Not until later did I hear of hatred and suspicion of England being made the basis of Americanism.

On Real Music

There has been sudden improvement in many radio programs which formerly gave us horrible noises mislabeled "music."

Perhaps this is merely incidental to what a columnist calls "The ASCAP brawl." But however this brawl may end, let us hope that the increased presentation of real music will continue.

Draft No Lark

I have been noticing that much of the draft news seems to deal solely with the lot of the poor married man. Surely you must realize that the single man who will be inducted will face just as many hardships as far as breaking away from his family, work, and related phases of his environment. Give some due to these men.

The draft news plays up this phase of National Defense as a lark. It is anything but. The draft is something serious and we should all understand it as such. Let us all stop asking eligible draftees "Hasn't the Army gotten you yet?" The next person who asks me that I'm going to run through with an 8-inch bayonet.

Lastly, recently a draft article stated "local draftees line up for their first roll call." Many of the men inducted have already seen some military service. This type of life is not entirely new. I served an enlistment with a New York National Guard outfit and also completed two Citizens Military Training Encampments. The draft is necessary for national defense. But let us all respect it and not make the subject a glorified Boy Scout hike.

Where Should The Sacrifice Be?

Although the general theme of your editorial of January 9, entitled "Where Is the Sacrifice?" is one with which I am in hearty accord, I find myself impelled to carp at a couple of the details. Undoubtedly we must prepare to make sacrifices, at present principally economic. It is a fair criticism to say that the President should have introduced us to those sacrifices at the earliest possible moment and in the plainest language.

Your editorial, however, seems to me to be a peculiarly unfortunate example of a state of mind which is entirely too common in this country—a determination to face unflinchingly the severest sacrifices on the part of others. Furthermore, your candidates for service as examples of patriotic sacrifice are ill-chosen. An essential to the sacrificial act is the possession of something to sacrifice. The incidence of champagne suppers among WPA workers has been very much exaggerated; and the amount allocated to WPA in the present budget is not, unless there is a decrease in its beneficiaries much more marked than can at present fairly be predicted, likely to increase that incidence very much. Similarly, the ordinary recipient of agricultural payments probably lacks the wherewithal to make a really impressive gesture of self-denial.

WPA workers and farmers are, in fact, among those least well equipped to commence the great sacrifice. But the country abounds with other outstanding candidates. The newspaper industry might, for instance, start the ball rolling by advocating, in a series of well-reasoned and unanswerable editorials, the repeal of its special mailing privileges, which, I understand, largely account for the fact that the Postoffice annually reports a distressing deficit instead of a sizable profit. Holders of tax-free bonds would appear, to me at least, truly inspirational were they to inaugurate a vigorous campaign for the abolition of the tax immunity presently enjoyed by the income from such bonds. Numerous other examples suggest themselves.

The sacrifice should, in general, take the form of more and higher taxes rather than greater economy in expenditure. The largest conceivable reduction in nondefense expenditures would make a relatively small dent in this year's budget. Where Mr. Roosevelt and Congress have been at fault is in their attempt to meet the expenditures of this decade with the taxes of decade-before-last. The income tax, for instance, can and should be enormously increased; so should the estate and gift taxes. (It might be added that the plugging of one or two notorious loopholes in the estate tax, such as the failure to tax property passing under the exercise of a special power of appointment, has long been in order.) The recipient of a middle-bracket income—between, say $4,000 and $20,000 a year—could pay about three times the income tax he pays now and still maintain a standard of living considerably above that of the occupant of a corresponding economic position in Germany or, for that matter, Great Britain. He would, of course, have to give up a great deal, but I believe we are all agreed on the necessity and desirability of sacrifice. We might profitably investigate the British expedient of a heavy tax on the sale of nonessential consumer goods, a tax designed both to raise revenue and to discourage the diversion of the national energy to the production of such goods; the constitutional difficulties might be considerable, but the history of the income tax shows us that no constitutional difficulty is really insurmountable.

Of course, both methods of balancing the budget—economy and higher taxes—should be employed; but economic history demonstrates that Government taxation and expenditure have formed an ever-expanding spiral; the demand for reduction of Federal expenditure is perennial, but the eventual solution, from the time of Washington on, has been increase of revenue rather than decrease of disbursement.

A New Aid Plan

The United States cannot avoid gambling. If we were absolutely sure that Britain could win with our aid, we would give her all of it, and waste nothing on preparations which we should never need. If we were sure that she is doomed, in spite of all which we can do, we would waste nothing on a hopeless effort, but devote ourselves to our own preparations.

As it is, we are splitting the difference. We are giving Britain a fraction of our production, hoping that will be enough, but feeling that we cannot afford to be wholly unprepared.

It does not seem to be realized that there is a fourth plan, which gives Britain in her hour of greatest need all which any plan could give, and also gives us as much as the present plan. This is possible because the different needs are timed; our serious need cannot come until Britain's is over. Any equipment which we may be hoarding against possible future need is now inert, idle, wasted, while the need for it is terrible over there.

This appalling waste can be diminished by dividing our production according to time. Instead of allotting each day's production, so much to Britain and so much to us, make a safe estimate of the least time we may be allowed before being attacked, and then during the first half (or other fraction) of this interval send to Britain everything we produce which would help her and would not be actively used here; for the rest of the interval allot everything to us. Thus both parties get the same total amount; we get ours in plenty of time; the British get theirs sooner, which may mean the difference between life and death.

Evidently this method might not apply to such things as destroyers, which take a long time to build.

It would not be surprising if we were to learn that a plan so simple and promising had already been instituted, at least in part. As long as this is uncertain presentation of the plan, however, seems proper, and perhaps very important.

Outside Washington

A member of the Congress is quoted as saying he does not trust the President. He may be surprised and interested to learn that the people out in the country do. They have every faith in him. Our Representatives get together, talk it over, have their pictures taken and continue to inhabit their little world. They haven't the remotest idea what the masses are thinking about and saying and doing. Frankly, I was misled this past year by the Washington complex. I followed material given out there and at long last found I was all wet. I wish you would print what a man here in the East wrote recently about the President. It has been widely copied and applauded and represents a point of view which doesn't get into the Capital very often—if ever.

"An address of more than 3,000 words, 100,000,000 listeners, not a pause, not a hesitation, not a repetition, not a mispronounced word, not a single false emphasis—clear, cogent, resonant, melodious—fashioned under the stress and strain of intense events with everybody urging him to present a point of view—cool, calm, collected—I am proud of a race that can produce such a man, by all the gods. I for one am glad the God of battles so recently held our fate and fortune—our destiny and our destination—in his almighty hand."

Against War

"Was the peace-minded President right or wrong when he thus spoke four years ago?" asks J. A. Pfeiffer in The Post of January 11, after quoting from an address of President Roosevelt delivered in 1936.

There is only one answer to the question. Mr. Roosevelt was right when he spoke up so strongly for peace in 1936; he is wrong today when he turns his back on his earlier stand and takes the steps that daily increase the danger of United States involvement in Europe's war.

Aunt Matilda's Antiques

UP UNTIL the time of her death, if Aunt Matilda went anywhere near a place that advertised antiques she would insist upon stopping to see what they had. And there are some who say that if it were not for this habit she would be alive today. For the last ancient thing that she acquired was an attack of smallpox that proved to be her finish. This was in India, just after the war of 1914-1918, when she was on a world cruise, and had insisted on poking around in the recesses of a bazaar in Bombay.

Her home, they said, was crammed to the eaves with purchases made during the depredations of 45 energetic years, although the report could not be verified during her lifetime, for she never showed anyone through her house, nor had any overnight guests. It was not until after her death that I found the reports to be well founded, for it fell to my lot to receive her latest purchases, as well as to inventory and catalogue all of the earlier ones, as a preliminary to the settlement of her estate.

Aunt Matilda had become a legend in our family before her death, but now that she was gone and no longer able to carry her end of the banter that used to break out wherever she was, the gaunt and exotic outlines of her most intimate life stared out from the litter she left behind, and proved her legendary quality more than ever. Yet until after the death of Aunt Kate, the slightly younger, and unmarried, sister of the gaunt spinster whose tale I relate, I said little about what I had found, or my theories concerning it.

As for Uncle Thomas, the once dashing and adventurous husband of Kate, he is so ancient himself and his mind is so lost in the mists of time, that it can do little harm to relate the facts now.

My inventory had taken me through room after room of Aunt Matilda's rambling mansion. I had catalogued early American spittoons, dozens of antimacassars, firearms—from colonial muskets and blunderbusses to rifles such as Uncle Tom carried against the Indians in the late 70s—wax funeral flowers under glass, transparencies of Niagara Falls, and mementoes of the Philadelphia Centennial, the first Chicago World's Fair and the Pan-American Exposition. And I was in a curious daze over what might come next, when I stumbled on the locked room.

This brought me up with a start, and for two reasons. One was that the room was locked at all, for none of the others had been so much as closed. There were dust covers over the furniture, and things had been somewhat pushed together, but once the house was entered there were no particular barriers to overcome in getting at anything it contained.

The second thing that aroused me was that this room, whose door was stronger and thicker than any in the house, and was made secure, moreover, by a gigantic lock such as was used in colonial days, was in the best spot in the house. To judge from its location, both its size and its prospect were to be preferred to the one right next to it, yet this second best room was Aunt Matilda's bedroom.

It was from the latter room that, in the following week, and after much prodding and poking, I hit upon the large key that gave me access to the chamber of mystery. And by that time the enterprise of entering the corner room had become so much of my aunt's private life that was involved in prying into a place that she so obviously had planned to keep inviolate. So I opened the door with a feeling of triumph and an avid appetite for whatever I should find there.

Yet when I had entered, and after looking futilely for a light switch, had thrown open the blinds and raised the curtains so that I could see, I realized my intrusion at once. For here were collected and arranged in order, what were undoubtedly my aunt's most highly treasured antiques—the very ones, I am convinced, that started her out upon her strange mania.

They centered about the fireplace, and above this hung a portrait of my uncle, Thomas, in his blue Army uniform, dating from a time when Matilda and Jane and he were all much younger than I am now. But there was no portrait of Aunt Jane. There were, in fact, no feminine objects at all. Instead, on a table beside an easy chair facing the fireplace, was an old pipe. Before the chair were some old slippers, and over the chair's arm was an old smoking jacket. Each of these objects I learned later by discreet research and subtle questioning of Aunt Jane had once belonged to Jane's husband, Thomas.

On the other side of the fireplace from this chair and this comfortable masculine smoking table, was another chair, one that obviously had been sat in quite often—much oftener than the one with the jacket and slippers and pipe. And both faced the portrait of Uncle Thomas, and the fireplace, which was swept and clean evidently had held no fire for a long, long time.

At Last, An Order Sheet

THE UNHAPPY inadequacy of our scope of defense preparation is at last being squarely faced. About two weeks ago, in response to requests repeated over a period of several months British purchasing commission officials presented to William S. Knudsen a consolidated schedule of estimated war needs. The schedule, a brief but pregnant document, covered every form of material Britain will require from us to be ready for the projected 1942 offensive.

As he has tried equally hard to obtain a similar schedule of American needs from the Army and Navy, Knudsen's first comment was: "My people haven't given me anything like this." The miserable confusion of Army and Navy statistical work—nobody's fault but the system's—is almost straightened out, however. Before long Knudsen will also have before him a short order sheet from our defense services. Then, finally, the American and British schedules can be added together, and the defense organization will have a precise mark to shoot for.

IN THE OPINION of such wise and experienced counselors as B. M. Baruch, the lack of such a precise statement of objective has been the most serious fault in the defense program. Undoubtedly it has been chiefly responsible for the program's inadequacy.

As to the inadequacy, there can be little doubt. The American order sheet is expected to call for some expansions in the present program. While the exact figures transmitted to Knudsen by the British high command are naturally the most closely guarded military secrets, the expansions they call for are known to be very great indeed. Planes and ships are the two types of material asked for in largest quantity. To meet the British plea for more planes, according to the best available information, we shall have to invest several billions additional in air production facilities and new contracts for finished goods. As for ships, it is fairly common knowledge that the British would like to get at least 300 mass-produced cargo vessels besides the 60 they already have on order.

ALL OF WHICH, of course, serves to underline the extreme urgency of the President's lend-lease bill for aid to Britain. Orders placed on behalf of the British have been tragically insufficient to date for three reasons.

1. The British were the step-children of the system of defense preparation which has now been superseded by the new Office of Production Management. The Army and Navy procurement branches had the main planning power in their hands, and by their very nature found it difficult to plan production for another power. Even those orders which the British themselves were sure they wanted did not receive prompt attention. Until rather recently, almost half the original British program remained to be contracted for.

2. The same confusion and slowness which afflicted us also afflicted the British. Before the document handed to Knudsen could be obtained, the able director of the British purchasing commission, Arthur Purvis, had to go to London and make a fight for it.

3. Even had the British decided exactly what they wanted at the start, they could not have paid for it. American financing will be necessary both for the additional plane program, and for the ships. The British had difficulty finding dollar exchange even for the 60 ships already under contract, and the exchequer's shortage of dollar exchange, in the period before the lend-lease bill, forced unfortunate compromises everywhere in the planning of American production for Britain.

IT IS TRAGIC that the facts should be faced so late. Yet although much time has been lost, there is still enough time left for a great national effort of production. Knudsen and his aides at the Defense Commission responded to the British needs figures in the most hopeful possible manner, remarking that the job was big, but that they would do their best.

In preparing for a national effort of production, it should be realized that the British are not treating this country as "an arsenal of democracy" because their own production has broken down. Recently three highly competent observers, one of them a military expert who had the right to go where he pleased, returned from Britain to this country. All three compared their own observations on the damage done Britain's productive facilities by German bombings with the reports in the press. All three were in complete agreement that this country had received an exceedingly exaggerated impression of the German achievement.

British industry, all three pointed out, has prepared for the bombers. In vulnerable areas, like Southampton, production has been decentralized. The Germans have sometimes struck severe blows, as when they destroyed an immense quantity of food on the Liverpool docks. But even where their bombing raids have been most brutal, production has gone on. In Southampton, for example, they achieved during one raid brief command of the air. Yet, although they gave the city a terrible hammering, they were so unsuccessful in their attack on the decentralized Spitfire plant that output in the week of the raid was four planes greater than output in the week previous. Thus there are the best reasons to hope that now the facts have at last been faced in this country, all will still be well.

Bargain-Basement Art

Among the innovations of the new year is the department store art dispersal sale. Ever since the announcement that William Randolph Hearst would sell his collection of art works, ranging from ancient suits of armor and even an Egyptian mummy or two, up to 77 paneled rooms and a complete twelfth century monastery at Gimbels' in New York, the art world and the shopping public has wondered how far this trend might go.

Will we yet see the Chester V. Dolpnogle collection of old masters, tapestries and Napoleonic carriages in Macy's window?

Will Col Luther Z. Scrummitt's unsurpassed collection of early Greek statuary, Benvenuto Cellini gold mugs and Etruscan vases be offered to the public through Marshall Field's, Filene's or B. Altman's.

We can already hear the bargain hunter demanding, "Can you direct me to the Van Dyck, Rembrandt and Michelangelo department?" "What floor are the Cistercian monasteries on?" and "Can I take the escalator to the Titians, French cloisters and eleventh century fishpools?"

"Have you read today's advertisements of the wonderful sales of crossbows at So-and-So's?" Mrs. Bromley will ask Mrs. Smathers.

"No, are they wearing them this season?" Mrs. Smathers may reply.

"Yes, and you should see the bargains in backplates, arquebuses, horse armor and spurs."

"I missed that ad, but I saw the one advertising the special spring showing of stone doorways, facades, grills, stairways and portals at Blank & Blank's."

"Really! I've wanted to get something in a facade for a long time and I'm thinking of buying Arthur one for his birthday."

"They're advertising a Jacobean paneled room that looks like a little gem. And a whole lot of ceilings from Moorish, Flemish and Austrian castles. I'm going down early as there will be a terrible rush."

"I wish I could find something in a nice Elizabethan chimney piece or a twelfth century iron gate. I shopped through five department stores yesterday without finding what I wanted."

"There's some lovely Aubusson tapestries in Whoziss's basement and on the fourth floor I saw some nice Hogarths, Peales, Bourguereaus and Bouchers at great bargains. I wish they had been there during the Christmas shopping season."

"Oh, look!"
"What?"
"Here's an ad for today only. Early English baronial houses, in sections, only one to a customer!"
"Not really!"

A Great Journalist

GROVER HALL, the editor of the Montgomery Advertiser, who died last week, was one of the greatest journalists in the history of the profession or craft. This has the stuffy sound of the standard obituary tribute, but let that not be held against Judge Hall. Hold it against me and the practice of heaping floral gates ajar and lodge emblems high on the graves of departed mediocrities which tend to cheapen superlatives. This little newspaperman was wise, brilliant and brave, but with his wisdom and courage he stirred in an ingredient of human understanding which distinguished his fighting tracts from mere flames of anger and hatred.

He did hate the evils that he fought, the greatest of which was the brutal bigotry of the modern Ku Klux, but without sparing the evils themselves, he nevertheless could spare those who were guilty of them in a way which somehow shamed them inwardly without humiliating them to the point of obstinate violence. Hate, however, was not his weapon. He fought hatred without inciting it, and, though many men were for a time aroused against him when he was fighting the Ku Klux in a focus of that strange infection, he lived to see a day when he was honored in his home town as an honor to the town and the people were proud to say they knew Grover Hall, personally.

HE WAS so much better journalist than any columnist of the New York or Washington cult that without leaving Montgomery or attempting to extend his earnings and celebrity through syndication in the package-goods trade, he nevertheless became a man of good renown, as distinguished from mere fame or notoriety, throughout the newspaper trade. I wish it were possible to say that he was popularly well known to the same extent, for his influence would have been helpful, but that wouldn't be true. Beyond his own fork of the creek he wasn't very well known outside the calling which he adorned.

All this seems to call for some example of his greatness. That I am able to quote from an autographed copy of an editorial of his called "The Egregious Gentile Called to Account."

This was an essay on anti-Semitism in which Judge Hall, as he was called, began by saying that the gentile brother of the Jew, "invites and deserves arraignment before the bar of his own conscience." The turn of thought and phrase in which the Judge called the gentile before the bar "of his own conscience" was an example of his wise tact by which he appealed to the honor of his defendants and won them when the lack of it might have provoked them to barn-burning.

"The earth," he wrote, "swarms with men who think they are experts on Jews. Nobody attempts a critical estimate of the gentile, as a gentile. Nobody audits his balance sheet. Nobody invited him to give an account of his long, unbroken stewardship as the undisputed master of the human race . . . If the gentile could but bring himself to face his own microscope, held in his own steady, ruthless hand, the experience might save him from possible disaster which his demeanor invites. We think we do no harm to ourselves and our common institutions when, in individual social relations, we patronize the Jew. We think we are shrewd, discerning fellows when, in contemplating a citizen and neighbor who happens to be a Jew, we think of him and discuss him first as a Jew and then whatever else he may be. We attribute virtues to him as a class that are characteristic only of individuals; we attribute vices and frailties to him as a class that any man of sense should know are peculiar only to individuals, whether Jews or non-Jews.

"Thus we hound the Jew while imagining ourselves to be his friends, meaning by 'we' those of us that comprise the majority of us Americans, and could not consciously injure the Jew . . . We forget that the fools who form our mobs may be influenced profoundly by the manners and prejudiced deportment of people of their own kind above them in the scale of life . . . I have no disposition to low-rate the status of the gentile. Our political and social position are more secure. We make more money than the Jews. We know nothing of the bitterness that flavors the acrid cup of a helpless minority group. We have been so long . . . in undisputed power, politically, economically and spiritually that we have never had an opportunity to know whether in facing an invincible oppressor of our kind, we would be brave . . . I as a gentile know that if I wish I can steal, lie, murder, get drunk or commit any other of the known indecencies, and that while I may be punished, I, instead of my kind, will be put on trial. In no circumstances would I hear that taunting phrase, 'Gentile. Catch him.'"

A GREAT American, the Judge was, whose country and profession are the better for his having lived and worked among us. And the people of Montgomery, where he fought the Klux to its face in daytime when the hoods were off, so regarded him that when he lay dying, the Governor, the men of the Advertiser staff and, in all probability, the Greek waiter at the lunchroom with whom he sometimes argued world affairs, offered their blood for transfusion.

Britain After Victory

By Mark Sullivan

Are Workers Demanding Socialism?

The United States is considering a plan to give practically unlimited aid for British victory. That we should aid Britain has the overwhelming support of majority American opinion. Since we are about to do this, it is proper our Congress should know everything that anyone else knows about what British victory means, what will be the status of Britain after it wins.

From several sources of public information and comment, from some public actions, and by inference from other actions, comes an indication that calls for inquiry. For putting it in words I quote Miss Dorothy Thompson:

"It is, I think, highly probable that Great Britain will emerge from the war as some form of Socialist economy. . . ."

AS THUS put by Miss Thompson, it is only a prediction. Statements or inferences from other sources go further than prediction; they suggest it is not merely a prediction, but a present plan.

In another connection Miss Thompson, supporting the assertion that socialism is coming in Britain and elsewhere, and expressing her own belief that it ought to come, writes that:

"Nowhere in the world today will the masses of workers give their full powers to their tasks for the sake of profit to a limited class. That is an inexorable fact. . . ."

By "profit to a limited class," Miss Thompson means, as her context shows, the system of privately owned business and industry, the system of free enterprise—called by its opponents, with intent to discredit it, the "capitalist" system. Miss Thompson's phrase for it, "profits to a limited class," is disparaging and inaccurate. The profits of the system of privately owned business do not go to a limited class. In America, the owners of business corporations include millions of small stockholders. Many well-known corporations have more stockholders than workers. In America at least, the total number of persons whose living and security depend upon private business, including insurance policyholders whose funds are invested in corporation bonds, is larger than the total number of workers. It is inaccurate even to speak of workers and beneficiaries of profit as if they were separate classes. The immense majority of Americans, if we take insurance policyholders into account, belong in both classes at the same time. The system of private business is integrated into our national life.

BUT TO LOOK at the private business system merely as a means of providing profit is to see only an aspect of it. Its function, the process for which it exists, is to make and distribute the goods which a people consume. And such, privately owned business is the best system so far devised. It is the only existing system in the world except that which was set up in Russia 24 years ago, features of which have been adopted in the other totalitarian countries. If either the Communist or Nazi-Fascist system is better than privately owned business, the superiority is not yet understood by the rest of the world. In no country, except the totalitarian countries themselves, does more than a small fraction of the people advocate communism or Nazi-fascism.

But let us not get mired in this most dreary and trite of ideological arguments. That is not the purpose of this article at all. The purpose here is to deal with something very immediate, and very urgent for America to understand. The purpose is to deal with Miss Thompson's assertion that "nowhere in the world today will the masses of workers give their full powers to their tasks for the sake of profit to a limited class." This, coupled with Miss Thompson's other assertion that "Great Britain will emerge from the war as some form of Socialist economy," gives rise to a disturbing implication. It is an implication only, but Miss Thompson's context seems to support it clearly.

It is an implication about the attitude of the workers of Great Britain, who compose the Labor Party, from which comes the demand that Britain become a Socialist country. Miss Thompson's meaning seems to be that the workers of Great Britain would be unwilling to defend the Britain that now exists, the system of privately owned industry that now prevails. Miss Thompson seems to make the workers of Britain say, in effect: "We won't willingly or heartily fight or work against naziism merely to defend the Britain that now exists. If it is a case of defending the Britain that now is, let it go, let Hitler take it. We will only put our hearts into opposing Hitler provided we are assured that Britain is to become a Socialist country."

I DO NOT believe the masses of British workers say this. So far as it is said at all, it is a very small number of political leaders of the British Labor Party who say it.

But America ought to find out who in Britain takes this attitude, and whether they are in responsible positions. Since our Congress is, in effect, about to underwrite British victory, it is reasonable our Congress should know any commitments that may have been made by responsible persons in Britain, to take effect in the event of victory; whether there are war aims which include socialism for Britain.

In short, our Congress should know just how serious is the assertion, or prediction, that Britain, at the end of the war, is to be a Socialist country. The assertion is made by others besides Miss Thompson, some of them in a position to know. Our Congress should learn whether authoritative persons in Britain have this expectation or intention.

Vengeance For Jutland?

By Adm. Yates Stirling

Hitler May Risk It

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 13.—On the last day of May, 1916, the greatest naval battle of modern times was fought—the Battle of Jutland. It was the result of an accidental encounter of the concentrated British and German fleets in the North Sea.

The British lost 6,097 men; the Germans, 2,545. The British lost three battle cruisers, three armored cruisers and eight destroyers. The Germans lost one predreadnaught battleship, one battle cruiser, four light cruisers and five destroyers.

The larger losses of the British caused the Germans to claim a victory, but the British grand fleet maintained the upper hand in the North Sea until the end of the war, never being challenged afterward by the Germans. Had the German fleet delivered a knockout blow, Germany would have won the war.

Is another Battle of Jutland a possibility today? Can Germany send to sea a striking force capable of overwhelming a part of the British navy and so deplete Britain's naval fighting power that the control of the seas might pass to the Axis powers?

THE GERMAN fleet today consists of two 35,000-ton battleships, two 26,500-ton battle cruisers, two pocket battleships, two 8-inch gun cruisers, five 6-inch gun cruisers, with proportionate destroyers to guard such a fleet. Besides Germany has probably 100 or more submarines.

The British fleet is greatly concerned over the possibility of the invasion of the British Isles, and has, in all probability, disposed its naval forces to the best advantage for that contingency. Yet, it is more than likely that Great Britain is holding a concentrated force of warships in the vicinity of the North Sea capable of successfully fighting the combined German warship strength, that is now inactive in German naval bases. One point in favor of the British is that their ships and personnel are obtaining experience in the war while the German naval personnel have been practically inactive.

German success in an action between the German fleet and a British naval force would be so advantageous to Germany at this critical stage of the war that Hitler might take the risk of such a move as would be entailed in a sortie with this German force, hoping to catch the British unprepared to meet such an emergency.

THE ITALIAN navy in the Mediterranean appears to be held in check by British warships in that sea. Little help can be expected by Hitler from this source at present.

The French fleet not in the hands of the British is formidable, and might be acquired by Hitler. It is now in French bases as yet unoccupied by Germany. If Hitler can obtain these ships, together with some of the Italian warships, he might with the help of German personnel, organize a force that could cooperate with the German fleet in an action to the southward of the English Channel off the coast of France. Here, this combined fleet could be assisted by thousands of airplanes from airfields in France.

There may be a second Jutland, provided Hitler is willing to run the risk of an entire annihilation of this fleet, and if everything should turn out to his advantage in obtaining the French navy and in uncorking the Mediterranean for the Italian navy. This he might do through intensive German air attacks against the British fleet in that closed sea, and in destroying the Royal Air Force with the Mediterranean fleet, denying to the British fleet its air support.

IF SUCH a victory could be achieved by Germany, she would wipe out the onus of Jutland and be on the fair road to the command of the North Atlantic Ocean.

The cautious behavior of the Italian navy in the Mediterranean in refraining from battle with British warships to conserve their units, and the coercion by Hitler of the Vichy government to obtain the assistance of the French navy, may all be a part of a plan for a naval blitzkrieg, which the already embattled British navy would have difficulty in meeting.

Spare Time Yields Six-Room House

Winston-Salem, N. C. (AP).—Bob Leigh, working in his spare time over a period of five years, built a two-story, six-room cabin. He had the beams installed and the roof constructed by hired artisans, but otherwise the structure, a showplace, is entirely his handiwork.

He even cut the colored glass used in several of the windows.

The Women Of France

By Betty Barzin

They Keep Nation's Spirit Alive

This is the second of a series of uncensored articles about how the women of France are reacting to the Nazi domination of their country by Betty Barzin, famous Belgian writer who has just arrived in New York.

Copyright International News Service

New York, Jan. 13.—In most cities of unoccupied France there is a German or Italian "armistice commission" which generally stays in the best hotel of the town and is lavishly guarded by French police, not to speak of their own Gestapo, of course.

In Toulouse, the commission arrived early one morning and the officers promptly sat down to breakfast. They ordered coffee and milk, eggs, honey, bread and butter, in other words, they ordered the very things (except bread) which could scarcely be found in southern France.

The management produced everything, except butter. Thereupon, the officers complained to the headwaiter who endeavored to explain that for weeks there had not been a pat of butter in the town.

"We expect to have butter for breakfast tomorrow," he was ordered.

ON THE following morning, there was no butter, and the officers asked to see the manager. A lady turned up, for the manager was in a German prison camp, and his wife has taken his place.

"We made it quite clear yesterday that we would expect butter this morning," said one of the officers.

"I am sorry," was the reply. "There is no butter available in these parts. But no doubt you gentleman could arrange for some to be sent here from the occupied area. I understand there is plenty there. And it would be such a help to all of us to have some. Our children need it badly."

And she bowed and turned away. It was rumored afterward that the German officers did get their butter, but that they carefully hid it in their rooms. Later, however, the Germans of the occupied zone made a deal with the French authorities of the unoccupied zone: The German army of occupation bought about 55,000 pounds of Roquefort cheese, in exchange for which they allowed about 11,000 pounds of butter from the occupied Charente district to be sent to the south of France.

In the Rue d'Alsace-Lorraine in Toulouse there is a well-known candy shop which bears the name of the Marquise de Sevigne, one of France's greatest woman writers. The shop is famous for its chocolates, but there is no chocolate to be found in France nowadays, except for prisoners of war.

FROM TIME to time there are long queues of old and young women outside the marquise shop. This happens on the days when the usual poster stating "No Chocolate Today" is withdrawn for a few hours and harassed assistants sell a 2-ounce tablet to those who can prove that they have a close relation detained in a German prison camp.

Few men visit the shop these days, but members of the so-called "German Meteorological Commission," in full uniform, never fail to call and to walk away with larger rations than those to which the women in the queue are entitled.

One afternoon, four German officers were seen in the Rue d'Alsace-Lorraine. Three of them stopped outside the candy shop and admired its window display, which is always artistically done, although made up mainly of empty boxes and partly of most tempting candied fruit (the candy part of which is saccharine, of course).

The fourth officer went inside. A well-dressed woman, about 35, passed by. Suddenly she stopped, turned, took a deep breath, and before anyone had time to realize what was about to happen, a beautifully gloved hand had shot out and struck one of the officers' left cheek.

THE CROWD gasped.

There was a stony silence. The Germans were too amazed to be furious.

But an elderly French officer who was with the German party (in unoccupied France, uniformed Germans are never seen in public without one or more Frenchmen in uniform) took the young woman's arm and said sternly:

"Madame, why have you done this? Do you realize what it may mean to all of us?"

Her voice did not shake when she answered:

"I simply had to do it. My father is an officer, like you, sir. He is a prisoner up there. He suffers too much at the hands of those people. I had to do it. I feel better now."

She was taken to prison in a military car. The young woman is still in prison, waiting for a French civilian court to try her.

GERMAN officers no longer buy chocolate in the Rue d'Alsace-Lorraine in Toulouse, which maybe is all that the lady wanted after all . . .

In Montpellier, three sisters, two of whom lost their husbands in the last war, own a fashionable glove shop which also sells perfumes and vanity bags. Members of the locally-stationed "Armistice Commission" called at the shop to make extensive purchases. They were disappointed, however, because the shop was virtually empty. The only goods on sale happened to be very small-sized gloves, plain eau de cologne, and a few vanity cases adorned with embossed and enameled French flags and Union Jacks.

The gloves proved far too small for German requirements, for German women have notoriously large hands. The German officers were looking for some exquisite French perfume; plain eau de cologne obviously did not appeal to them since there is more than enough of that in Germany itself. As to vanity cases, well, the very sight of enameled French flags and Union Jacks, made them shudder!

So they turned away and never came back again.

ALL THE WHILE, brisk trade was going on at the back of the shop, where French customers found all they wished for. "You see, the owners of the shop explained, 'we do not want German money, and we do not want the German clientele. As long as we have anything to sell, we are only too glad to sell it to our own folks. There was no other way in which we could keep these "gentlemen" away from our store . . ."

In French music shops there is not a single record of "The Marseillaise" to be found. French mothers have bought up all these records and are keeping them stored among their family treasures.

"We do not want our children to forget their national anthem," they tell you.

Since the armistice, the familiar opening bars of "The Marseillaise" which one heard at the beginning and at the end of every French official broadcast, have been replaced in unoccupied France by a few bars of the marching song from "L'Ariesienne," Bozet's well-known opera.

No Foreign War Committee Director Quits

Armstrong Disagrees With Verne Marshall On Group's Policy

O. K. Armstrong, magazine writer and field director of the No Foreign War Committee, resigned from that organization yesterday, declaring he had differences with Verne Marshall, the committee's chairman.

Armstrong announced his withdrawal from the committee shortly before the Department of Justice announced it had subpened Marshall to appear today before the special grand jury on suspected violations of the election laws.

One of the founders of the No Foreign War group, Armstrong made it clear he disapproves of Marshall's direction of the committee's activities. In addition to differences with Marshall over policy, the field director said he was disappointed in the committee's "unfavorable publicity that had precipitated public suspicion as to the organization's financial backing."

While announcing his own resignation Armstrong intimated that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh may have nothing to do with the committee any more. Lindbergh never has been affiliated with the organization, but he was to have delivered a speech under auspices of the No Foreign War Committee from St. Louis, Mo. Yesterday Armstrong said the colonel had authorized him to say he will not speak in St. Louis, at least under the auspices of the Verne Marshall committee.

Explaining his resignation Armstrong added "Plans I had hoped to follow in this organization to keep this country out of foreign wars, have been subordinated to matters which seem to me extraneous.

"Every one connected with the committee has agreed with me on a polcy of positive and definite aims with a constructive program for action, with the exception of the chairman.

"I have remained at work for the committee until I have become convinced that my usefulness to the committee is at an end unless there is a change in the chairmanship."

Marshall, learning of the grand jury subpena against him, commented that he was sure if he were not chairman of No Foreign War Committee and opposed to "giving away" of American war material, he would not be called by the grand jury.

Others scheduled to appear at Judiciary Square today are:

George W. Robnett, vice chairman of the People's Committee to Defend Life Insurance and Savings.

Robert B. Murray, New York, secretary of the New York State United Republican Finance Committee.

C. A. Rumley, New York, and C. B. Franklin, Rocester, N. Y., of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government.

George F. Wilson, Manchester, N. H., of the New Hampshire Volunteer Willkie Committee.

Princess Hysterical After Arrest

PRINCESS HOHENLOHE

Stefanie Hohenlohe Faces Trial Friday On Deportation

By the United Press

Palo Alto, Calif., Jan. 13.—Princess Stefanie Hohenlohe, described as "nearly hysterical" and sick abed, but stoutly maintaining she was "anti-Nazi and pro-British," was arrested last night at an apartment house by United States Immigration officers tonight and ordered held for deportation trial Friday.

In the seclusion of her small apartment where she has been living under the name of "M. J. Hunter," Acting Immigration Director Paul Armstrong and Deputy United States Marshal Pat Farley served the Hungarian noblewoman with an arrest warrant charging that she had overstayed her United States passport limit.

Attorney Stephen White posted a $25,000 bond to insure her availability.

Shortly before her arrest, Princess Stefanie, reputed friend of high-ranking Nazis, issued a statement through her attorney, Joseph Bullock, announcing that "all I want is a chance to prove my innocence"—of intimations that she has been actively pro-Nazi in the United States.

"I am anti-Nazi, pro-British and pro-American," she said. "London is my home, and England is my country."

She said Nazis had confiscated her home in Austria.

The princess, according to Bullock, had two reasons for overstaying the deadline: She decided to seek a hearing to clear herself of intimations she was actively pro-Nazi, and that she was too ill to travel.

Bullock said for a time the princess resided at the home of Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, German consul general in San Francisco.

"When she learned the attitude of the United States toward her visit, she left immediately. She hasn't been at his home since and doesn't intend to communicate with him."

The Justice Department at Washington said that Stefanie's own physician told immigration officials "that she was obtaining and taking sedatives which had not been prescribed and this was largely responsible for her physical and mental condition." The physician, the department added, "said she would continue in that condition so long as she continues to take sedatives."

Simpson Offers Arms Limit Plan

to open tomorrow morning. Secretaries Hull, Morgenthau, Stimson and Knox will be among the first scheduled hearings on the measure invited to appear. Bloom hopes to conclude hearings this week, but said he will not close the door so long as there is important testimony to be taken.

Chairman George, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, also has called his committee tomorrow, but no date has yet been fixed for Senate hearings.

A movement also was reported under way to call William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to France, and Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring Ambassador to Great Britain, before the Senate committee for questioning. Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, was said to be ready to make a motion to this effect and authoritative sources said both Kennedy and Bullitt probably would accept such invitations, if proffered.

Leading the Senate opposition to the measure, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, set defeat, rather than modification of the bill, as his goal, and lashed out with a charge of "war propaganda" against the motion picture industry.

Warning Sent to Hays

Wheeler wrote Paramount News that "the propaganda for war that is being waged by the motion picture companies" might make some legislative restrictions necessary "unless the industry itself displays a more impartial attitude." He sent a copy of the letter to Will Hays.

The Montanan made the movie "war propaganda" charges at an informal press conference. He said he had information that "the Administration is encouraging propaganda pictures."

Simpson, in offering a substitute for the Administration aid bill in the House, emphasized his was in no sense an "obstructionist" move.

In addition to the proposed two-year time limit the substitute authorizes the President to provide defense articles only for:

"(A) The government of England or any other country which is a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations, and Ireland; and

"(B) Any other country whose defense the Congress of the United States by concurrent resolution declares vital to the defense of the United States."

Thus neither China nor Greece could be aided unless Congress passed separate concurrent resolutions.

Woman Drinks Wine, Sings 'Ballad' On 103d Birthday

Newark, N. J., Jan. 13 (AP).—Countess Virginie Violetta Melanie De Laune toasted her 103d birthday today with wine and sang a ballad of the amours of a French regiment which brought blushes to some of her female cocktail party guests.

Later, over cigarettes and more wine, the diminutive white-haired countess, who once lived in the Palace of Versailles and was a childhood companion of Empress Eugenie, talked of more serious things.

Life is not so appealing now, she said, now that her native France is "no more. I am ready to go."

She expressed the belief that "perhaps" the reason for her longevity was, "I have always lived and eaten simply."

White Sales Test Housewife's Linen Acumen

War Conditions Focus Interest on Household Supplies

By Martha Ellyn,
The Household Editor.

JANUARY is the month when business takes inventory of its stock. And it is a good time for the homemaker to take inventory of the household necessities such as towels, sheets and pillow cases.

Martha Ellyn

With the linen departments of the stores stacked high with a multitudinous assortment of good buys, it doesn't seem possible that the supply will not always be adequate. But with economic conditions changing as rapidly as a chameleon's colors, there is the possibility that some household linens, like some other commodities, be on the short change side.

This does not mean that home production is not adequate, but it does mean that the wheels of industry might turn in the interest of defense measures rather than for personal comforts.

Linens (the real linens) come mostly from Ireland. They are still coming through, but with the ever-changing conditions there might be an interlude. Merchants have anticipated conditions and laid in large stocks.

Facts About Sheets

The average consumer I have found, after making a number of inquiries, knows less about buying sheets than almost any other staple. I heard one experienced housekeeper say that in her many years of running her house, that she had never bought sheets, her mother having endowed her with a plentiful supply.

For Mrs. Housewife who may be going forth to take advantage of the January White Sales, here is some factual information about sheets. Ordinarily, sheets are made of muslin and percale—though a few ultra sophisticates yearn for linen and satin sheets. "Which type of sheets is the best buy for me?" is the question the consumer should ask herself. That means answering several questions before the decision can be made. And only the consumer, and not the sales person, can answer the questions. The consumer knows her income, her budget, just what she requires in sheets and what she can afford to spend. A sheet is a long-time item, so a long-time view should be taken of the situation. Examine all the types, read the description of each carefully, and then let your judgment tell which is best for your particular use.

A number of consumers make the mistake of looking at muslin as a practicality as against percale, the luxury. Percale may cost more but in the long run may turn out to be more economical. What is the difference between muslin and percale sheets? That is a question often asked. There are these differences:

Muslin Sheets—These are woven of heavier threads and contain fewer threads to the square inch than percale. Muslin sheets are heavier, and the texture is coarser than percale.

Percale Sheets—These are more closely woven, with more and finer threads to the square inch than muslin—resulting in a fine, smooth texture and beautiful appearance.

There are three major classifications of muslin and percale sheets found in the stores.

68x72, 68x76, 72x72 Count Muslin—The highest priced muslin sheet. High count, heavyweight muslin. Used where sturdiness and extra-hard ware are the chief requirements. Best muslin wearing qualities and good washability, but heavy to handle if laundry is done at home and expensive to send out at pound rates.

86x94 Count Carded Percale—Popular priced percale sheet. Smoother, more luxurious texture than muslin, and lighter. Sells for approximately the same price as heavyweight muslin but costs considerably less for laundry if sent out at pound rates. Easier to wash at home. Becoming increasingly popular due to its new lower cost, its fine wearing qualities and its smooth feel.

The following table tells the different sizes of sheets, giving both the bed size and the torn sheet sizes. "Torn size" is a traditional reference to the tearing of the length of the sheet by hand in order to insure an absolutely straight hem. Always deduct 10 inches from the torn length of any sheet to get the actual final size. Five inches are turned under in hemming and another 5 inches are lost by shrinkage in the first washing.

STANDARD SHEET SIZES

BED SIZE	TORN SHEET SIZE
Crib (up to 30 in. wide)	45x72, 50x72
Cot or narrow day bed (up to 30 in. wide)	54x99, 50x108
Single bed (up to 36 in. wide)	63x99, 63x103
Twin bed (30 in. wide)	72x99, 72x108 81x99, 81x108
Double bed (54 in. wide)	90x108, 90x113 81x99, 81x108

Furnish House To Match Hair

It won't be enough next season to dress to type—you'll now be expected to furnish your background to match your own coloring. At least, many manufacturers are lining up their new colors on the basis of the complexion types of American women.

It's interesting to learn, from their extensive surveys, that 40 per cent of American women are the brown-haired type, 20 per cent the silver-gray type, while blondes, brunettes and redheads all together comprise 40 per cent. And doubly interesting it is to discover that the silver-gray type is the most important to the manufacturers because she spends 75 per cent of all the money tossed around by the women!

It's About Time

IT'S ABOUT TIME to surprise the gals the next time they lunch at your house. Promote your aluminum ring mold from the kitchen to the dining room. Fill with small cut flowers . . . use little branches of greens to hold them in place.

Mary Haworth's Mail

At 14, Average Girl's Vocal Cords Are Not Sufficiently Developed to Warrant Serious Voice Training, Singer Tells "Marie D."

LAST FRIDAY THIS COLUMN discussed a letter from a motherless girl, 14, who lamented her aunt's opposition to her ardent wish to study French and voice—as her French-born, musically gifted mother had planned. She was advised to be of good heart; to hold fast to her aspirations; to make the best use of such immediate educational opportunities as came her way—and thus be ready to embrace larger opportunities as the future affords them. Many column readers have indorsed this advice—and two fine letters of representative comment are published below. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Being a musician and a singer, as well as a mother, I feel that I may be in a position to give some helpful suggestions to "Marie D.," the 14-year-old girl whose letter (published in your column of January 10) tells of her frustrated desire to take voice and French lessons.

Until I was 18 I was denied music lessons—the one thing in life I most wanted. Music was such a passion with me that by the time I was 12 I had taught myself to play the piano. But I was 18 before I had an opportunity to study voice. I have since become a very good singer.

But this is what I wish to say to Marie: While the child may think her aunt is being unreasonable in compelling her to study Latin, that is the very language she should master now—because it will give her an invaluable foundation on which to build a later knowledge of French, Italian and Spanish. When she knows Latin the other languages will "come easier."

If it is her purpose to become a real singer and musician Marie will need to be able, eventually, to sing in at least three foreign languages. Also, she will need to be a good pianist, and she will need a general background of musical education, including harmony, musical history, etc. A knowledge of dramatics is likewise very helpful.

At the age of 14 the average girl's vocal cords are not sufficiently developed to be used in serious vocal study. A very fine voice instructor, with whom I studied, once told me he never accepted a voice student under 18 years of age for that reason. There are, of course, a few exceptions, such as Deanna Durbin. But they are rare, and the result of especially careful training, such as one cannot get from the average voice teacher. More voices are spoiled than "made" by premature vocal training.

My advice to Marie is this: Devote the next four years to serious study of general educational subjects, including Latin. Later launch into French, Italian and Spanish or German. Learn to play the piano well, so that she can accompany herself. By the time she is 18 she will have acquired a substantial musical background upon which to build a real singing career. She will have plenty of time, after 18, to devote to singing exclusively. Just now her job is to become "basically" educated—in preparation for the joyous time when she can devote all her energies to perfecting her vocal talent. Sincerely yours,

SINGING MOTHER.

Real Singer Profits From Study of Latin

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please tell "Marie D." not to worry about voice lessons just yet. Because of an accident in childhood I was unable to study singing until I was 19—and then I went to a very great teacher in Europe. I was most distressed at having to begin so late, but my teacher said, "Sixteen is the ideal age to start serious vocal training, and you have not wasted your time. It is the ear that counts, if the voice is there!"

She was referring to the fact that I had constantly sought to improve my sense of pitch, and had read books on harmony and solfeggio (always with an A or C tuning fork on hand). In consequence, both she and my theory teacher had some foundation on which to build in training me. It is essential to learn to "hear" music completely in order to be a great singer; to be able to "hear" any note, or combination of notes, on sight—without waiting for the sound to come. The singer's instrument is within himself.

Marie D. should not rebel at her aunt's insistence on studying Latin. A singer should have a good knowledge of three or four languages, and Latin is a grand basis to start from. It will help her French and certainly her Italian, which is somehow necessary to smooth singing.

Lastly, a musical career imposes the severest mental and physical discipline. Real character is required to go through with it. Once a lot of technical ground has been covered, all her past experiences—her sympathy, her imagination, even her sense of frustration (which impels one to seek a higher harmony)—will be needed by Marie D. in the interpretation of great composers' most glorious thoughts.

It is everlasting work which finally makes expression easy, and it is a combination of life and what we bring to it that determines the response we waken in others. You, Miss Haworth, are an incredibly fine writer. But few people would give thought to your English because they are primarily entranced by your understanding. Most sincerely,

MARY F.

Colored Glass Revival

Colored glass is due for a comeback, according to some people in the know. It is welcome, for it adds such a lot of gaiety to many tables. Five colors are going to be featured in the new lines—green, blue, crystal, purple and amber. But why not red, for it's truly the most regal color of all for glass . . . There are interesting stories of the long efforts of glass factories of old to achieve the true ruby color, anciently revered.

Flat-Chested? You May Be In a Slump

Exercise and Proper Diet Will Bring Out Bust's Better Points

By Ida Jean Kain

THE FLAT-CHESTED girl is often in a slump. Her figure problem may not be with the bust itself. This contour may be spoiled by a hollow between the shoulder and bust, or by a shallow chest which she brings on herself by slumping.

Furthermore, the girl with the flat chest is inclined to think off her problem as a specific one when it is more likely to be general—lack of muscle tone, lowered vitality and scanty weight. In this case, the correction is a general health measure.

Higher vitality and good muscle tone go together. The way to develop vitality is through the muscles. Vitality is not in the muscles—it is in the organs, but the organs are developed by using the muscles. Good muscle tone gives the thin girl a better appetite, a more efficient digestive system, and makes her feel like standing up.

Exercise Is Indicated

The flat-chested girl needs outdoor exercise—skating, skiing sliding down hill, hiking—or any other activity that is exhilerating and puts a lot of fresh air in the lungs. In addition corrective exercise may be needed to fill out the chest and throat and to tone the pectoral muscles supporting the breasts.

Most effective for this purpose are exercises performed on a stretching bar. To avoid strain, the bar should be placed within easy reach while standing on the tiptoes. Hold with the palms of the hands forward, then pull up, raising the toes slightly off the floor. Don't try to chin yourself—you're not that husky!

Medicine ball exerices are a very good tonic. To fill out the chest and straighten the shoulders, toss the ball above the head and catch it with the hands above the head. In throwing the ball to someone, toss it upward.

Other good exercises are the backstroke and breast stroke as used in swimming. Because of the resistance offered by the water, it is better to actually swim, but the same strokes can be adapted to exercise.

Hints On Diet

When it comes to a gaining diet, the thin girl needs simple, nourishing food, starting with a good breakfast. Lay off the rich, heavy desserts for a while, and increase your calories through wholesome, easily digested foods like baked potato with butter, whole milk, cream, eggnogs. Add another piece of bread and a second pat of butter to each meal. You can't gain on rich foods unless they are well assimilated, and you need a balanced diet, with the necessary minerals and vitamins, to properly assimilate the foods you eat. Green vegetables and salads contain very few calories, but you need them for their minerals and vitamins. If your appetite is lagging, supplement your menus with the vitamin B complex. Ask your druggist for the concentrate that contains all the vitamin B factors and take one tablet daily.

Don't worry about your lack of curves—the main thing is to increase your vitality and you'll have a naturally good figure!

First Lady to Launch 'Home Parties Plan' Today

White House Tea Intended to Inaugurate Similar Benefits to Raise Funds For Campaign on Infantile Paralysis

By Hope Ridings Miller

A PARTY WITH A PURPOSE—and one that Mrs. Roosevelt hopes "will start something"—is scheduled at the White House this afternoon when the First Lady will entertain at a tea designed to inaugurate the "Home Parties Plan" to lend a helping hand to the helpless In other words, to raise funds to fight infantile paralysis.

The idea is to inspire hostesses all over the country to give benefit "home parties." Tea will be served in the state dining room from a table decorated according to a design that will be used by everybody who entertains at a fete for the infantile paralysis cause. Lester Gaba, New York designer, will be at the White House to supervise the setting of the table.

Detailed outlines for giving benefit "home parties" will be described, and I have an idea you're going to hear a lot about fetes of that type from now until the end of the month.

Women from 32 States will attend the tea, at which numerous plans for the celebration of the President's birthday will be discussed. The first part of the meeting will be broadcast from 4:30 to 4:45 p. m. Prominent speakers will include Grace Moore, noted soprano; Mrs. Claude Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; 9-year-old Delores Frances, Washington infantile paralysis victim, and Miss Dorothy Ducas, director of women's activities of the committee for the celebration.

To Be Honored At Luncheon

EARLIER TODAY Mrs. Roosevelt will be honor guest at a luncheon given by Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General. At 6:10 p. m., the First Lady will broadcast over N. B. C. on the March of Dimes program. Later, she will attend the dinner being given at the Carlton Hotel. All State representatives of the birthday balls committees have been invited to the fete, at which Keith Morgan, national chairman, will preside.

From the Carlton Mrs. Roosevelt will go to Constitution Hall to attend the Philadelphia symphony concert.

Mrs. Frank Knox will entertain at a luncheon for Mrs. Roosevelt tomorrow and in the afternoon the board of the Federation of Women's Clubs will be entertained at a tea at the White House at 4 o'clock. The First Lady will go to the National Theater tomorrow night to see "The Cream in the Well."

Crowded Calendar For First Lady

LEAVING FOR New York on Thursday, Mrs. Roosevelt will be off the Washington record until Sunday at noon when she and the President will entertain at a buffet luncheon for Democratic National Committee campaign officials. That afternoon, from 4 to 5, members of the national Democratic clubs will be received at the White House, and later, Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the tea to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies. On Sunday evening, the First Lady will be on hand for the Inaugural Gala at Constitution Hall.

On Inauguration Day, the Roosevelt schedule will start officially at 10:30 a. m. when the President and the First Lady are scheduled to attend church services. Following the ceremony at the Capitol, they will return to the White House to entertain 1,000 guests at luncheon. They then will view the Inaugural parade, after which the President will receive a number of Governors and other notables at 4:30 o'clock. A large tea at the White House is scheduled for 5 o'clock, and there will be a small dinner later.

Yugoslavian Violinist Guest At Legation

Zlatzo Balokovich, Wife Entertained By the Fotitches

The Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch were hosts at dinner last night, in honor of their famous countryman, Zlatko Balokovich, violinist, and Mme. Balokovich. The artist performed yesterday at Mrs. Townsend's musicale, and played informally last evening for additional friends who dropped in after the dinner.

Mme. Fotitch also is a talented pianist. She frequently plays duets with Mrs. Thomas Burke, who was among the guests last night. The hostess wore a gown of white chiffon with a bodice of sequins, particularly becoming with her dark hair.

Ranking guests at the dinner were Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, the Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, and the Australian Minister and Mrs. Casey. Others included Jacques Dumaine, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett, Countess Palffy, Orhan H. Errol, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, Robert Coe, Mrs. Arthur Woods, Mme. Raditsa, wife of the legation attache; M. and Mme. Petrinovitch and Mme. Banac, of New York.

The three are expected to come on to Washington tomorrow.

The Villarets Hosts at Tea

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Eugene Villaret were hosts at an informal tea yesterday in honor of Maj. Gen. Joseph A. Green, chief of Coast Artillery, and Mrs. Green.

The party was also in the nature of a farewell to Col. Villaret, who will leave tomorrow for service in North Carolina. His wife and children will stay on at their home in Springland Lane here "for the duration."

Yesterday the hostess wore a floor-length gown of green crepe with long sleeves and a draped neck. She was assisted by Mrs. Walter Goodrich, wife of Maj. Goodrich, C. A. C. Among those who called during the afternoon were Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox, Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Dravo, and many others from the service set.

Rep. Bloom Looking For Coat, His Guest's

On the trail of a lost overcoat is Representative Sol Bloom. Not his, but one belonging to a guest who attended the large tea at the Bloom home on Sunday afternoon. The man is Stokeley Morgan, formerly with the State Department here, and the overcoat is a heavy, dark gray, double-breasted model.

Some guest, in a hasty departure, probably took the coat by mistake, leaving in its place another. Anybody who knows anything about the lost garment will oblige Representative Bloom—and Mr. Morgan—by passing along the information.

Josephine F. Steinbach And W. F. Schrott to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Steinbach have announced the engagement of their daughter, Josephine Frances Steinbach, to Walter Frank Schrott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schrott, of Vienna, Austria.

The bride-elect is a graduate of St. Sophia College in Luxembourg.

Mr. Schrott attended school in London and Vienna and at present he is on the executive staff of the Hotel Mayflower. He is also secretary of the International Geneva Association in Washington.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Supreme Court Justices' Wives Hold 'At Home'

In accordance with an old Washington custom, which decrees that wives of Supreme Court justices shall be "at home" on Mondays, several of them received yesterday afternoon. However, these parties are unlike the Cabinet "at homes," in that they are small, informal and mobs of strangers are not expected to show up.

Receiving yesterday were Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. William O. Douglas and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter. Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wife of the Chief Justice, is recovering from an operation, and Mrs. Hugo Black is also still convalescing.

Anna Ward Feted By Miss Rudolph

Miss Anna Belle Ward has taken a few days off from her book-writing and motion-picture producing to spend Inauguration Week in the Capital. Yesterday she was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Miss Antoinette Rudolph at the Shoreham and in the afternoon reversed the hostess role and entertained at a cocktail party at the Mayflower in honor of Mrs. Willis Ballinger and Miss Madeline Rogge.

Guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Chan Gurney, Mrs. Lawrence Arnold, Mrs. Frances Case, Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. J. E. Wells, Mrs. John Clark, Lady Jacoby, Mrs. Lisbeth Coin and Mrs. Ryland Bryant.

Among those who dropped in at Mrs. Ward's afternoon party were Senora de Pastoriza, Senora de Caceres, Mrs. Alben Barkley, Mrs. Scott Lucas, Mrs. Max Truitt, Mrs. Thomas Cajigas, Mrs. Irene Caldwell and Mrs. McKenzie Davidson.

Among the many others present were Mrs. Grace Espallet, Mrs. Webster Ballinger, Mrs. Robert Watson, Mrs. E. A. Eddingore, Mrs. Anita King nad Mrs. Frank Bratton.

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Hostess At Musicale

Mrs. Roosevelt was hostess yesterday afternoon at another in a series of musicales which she gives every season. The artists were Eugene List, pianist; William Horne, tenor, and Felix Wolfes, accompanist.

Mr. List opened the program with a chorale, "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," from Bach, and also gave works of Chopin, Debussy, Mendelssohn and Albeniz. Mr. Horne sang several songs by Handel, Schubert, Bizet, Gershwin and MacDonald.

Mrs. Roosevelt Again Appears At Musicale

Illness Keeps Hostess, Mrs. Townsend, Away From Morning Affair

Though Mrs. Lawrence Townsend couldn't attend her morning musicale yesterday, owing to illness, Mrs. Roosevelt was present for the second successive time since the season's series began last week. The First Lady wore a gown of black velvet with gold embroidery on the sleeves and bodice and a black hat with a feather on the crown.

With her in her box were Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Ecuadorean Ambassador; Senhora de Martins, wife of the Brazilian envoy; Dona Elly Colonna, wife of the Italian envoy, whose social appearances are rare these days; Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the Secretary of War, and Mrs. Frank Walker, wife of the Postmaster General.

Greeted on all sides was Mrs. Joseph Davies, just back from several weeks at her Palm Beach villa. She has come to town for the inauguration festivities, of which her husband is chairman. Mrs. Davies wore a black broadtail coat over her brown wool frock and a matching brown felt hat.

Count Potocki With Mr. Townsend

Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czecho-Slovak Minister, and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg obligingly posed together for photographers. Count Potocki, the retiring Polish Ambassador, was present accompanied Mr. Townsend. Mrs. Arthur Rubinstein was in the audience to hear her famous husband play.

Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, recently recovered from an illness, shared her box with Mrs. Edwin Watson, Mrs. Charles Henderson, Countess de Baillet Latour and Mrs. Stanley Woodward. Mrs. Watson was in particularly high spirits because she had just heard that Ethel Barrymore and Raymond Massey will both be on hand for the Inaugural Gala on Sunday evening. The chairman of the gala looked smart in a black coat with a fur scarf and a powder-blue hat with a veil.

Mrs. Lionel Atwill, who accompanied Mrs. Charles Bromwell, wore her favorite black with a round white collar. Others in the audience included Mrs. Patrick Hurley and her daughter, Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn; Mrs. George T. Pettingill and Miss Peggy Wagner; Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Countess Lasocka, Miss Peggy Lansdowne and Miss Louise Stillwell.

Several Luncheons Follow Concert

Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose had as guests in her box Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Miss Margaret Delano Gage, Mrs. Robert Love Taylor and Mrs. Matthew Delaney. Later Miss Gage gave a luncheon for Senora de Alfaro, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Lady Chalkley, Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mrs. Loose, Mrs. Gann, Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mrs. Laurence Vincent Benet, Miss Margaret McNeirny, Mrs. Emerson Howe and Mrs. Ollie M. James.

Zlatko Balokovich, Yugoslav violinist, shared honors with Mr. Rubinstein on the program.

For the first time in many a day, Mrs. Townsend did not hold her regular luncheon in honor of the visiting artists following the concert. But several other smaller affairs were given in the Mayflower dining room.

Mrs. Frank Knox, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was among the guests of Mrs. Harry Huse, who entertained in honor of Mrs. William Howard Taft. Mrs. Robert Taft was also in the party.

Mrs. W. P. Tams, who makes her home at the Mayflower, had as her guests at luncheon Mrs. Harry Lockwood, Mrs. Charles W. Warden, Miss Grace Burton, Mrs. E. C. Coulter, Mrs. Francis E. Pope, and Mrs. William S. Covell.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

MRS. J. Borden Harriman who, for five decades has enjoyed a ringside seat at big events, will, as you might expect, come to town for the first third-term inauguration in history. On that day, January 20, she will also hand in her resignation as Minister to Norway.

DUDLEY HARMON

Though six months past three score years and ten, Mrs. Harriman is reported eager for another job. But after all, anyone energetic enough to take up skiing in the late 60s, as she did in Norway, could hardly be expected to be consigned to a rocking chair near the fire.

A NEW YORKER by birth and bringing-up, Mrs. Harriman prefers life in Washington. Her big house here, on Foxhall Road and high on a hill overlooking the Potomac, is leased to the Albert Deweys, and the owner has not yet settled on another one. Since her return to this country on the exciting voyage of the American Legion, Mme. Minister has spent most of her time in New York. She is completing her book on her Norwegian experiences, which, of course, must be carefully censored by the State Department.

Assisting her in putting the book together is her daughter, Scenario Writer Ethel Borden. A play on which Miss Borden has collaborated with Mary Cass Canfield, "Anne, by the Grace of God," has interested Producer John G. Wilson, who says he will put it on as soon as he finds three stars.

"DAISY" Harriman might never have become the woman of energy she is if her father hadn't been disappointed that she wasn't a boy. He taught her to swim by tossing her into a pool of cold water and made her practice walking for hours with a stack of books on her head. After a brief career devoted primarily to society (during which she founded the Colony Club) Mrs. Harriman went into politics. She did initial campaign work for President Wilson and remained a stanch Democrat, even through the Republican 20's, when hers was the only Democratic salon in Washington. At her famous Sunday night suppers she has numbered most big names, from Winston Churchill to John L. Lewis.

A FRIEND who knows Mrs. Harriman well describes her this way:

"Many women have as much brains as Daisy. But she's the type of person who does something about a situation. If she hears a family has run out of money, she doesn't just sigh and say what a shame, how dreadful. She says, 'Bring me some fried chicken and a basket. I'm going over there right away.'"

Mrs. Harriman was in town last week as the guest of Lady Lindsay. The wife of the former British Ambassador has taken the home of Mrs. Bayard Cutting for the winter.

COL. John W. Thomason, of the Marine Corps, has just completed another book—which means that for a while, anyway, he can stop getting up at 5 in the morning. Titled "Lone Star Preacher," it is due to appear on Inauguration Day.

The colorful colonel (he is fond of red bow ties, smoking jackets and Wellington shoes) rises at daylight when he has writing to do, for his job at the Marine Corps is a full-time one. He also illustrates all his work. Col. Thomason has writen numerous books and magazine articles, some of which are required reading at West Point. He and his charming wife—both Texans—live in an attractive apartment in an old remodeled house on Massachusetts Avenue. They have many beautiful Chinese things collected during years of service in the Orient.

Col. Thomason's grandfather, incidentally, was chief of staff for the Confederate general, Longstreet.

Chautemps Resident Here

Among members of the colony at the Wardman Park this season is Camille Chautemps, former prime minister and foreign minister of France, and Mme. Chautemps.

They have four children, the eldest, Mlle. Gisele Bouquet Chautemps, 15 years old, and the youngest, Antoinette, 8 months. The two boys, 11 and 4, are Jean Pierre Bouquet Chautemps and Jean Louis Bouquet Chautemps. The three older children started classes yesterday at the Maret School.

Rep. J. L. Johns' Bride Is Honored By Mrs. O'Kelliher

Senators, Representatives and Selective Service officers gathered to honor Mrs. Joshua L. Johns at a reception given on Sunday afternoon by Mrs. Victor J. O'Kelliher, wife of Col. O'Kelliher of the Advisory Council of the Selective Service System.

Mrs. Johns, who is the former Miss Marguerite Burdon, of Green Bay, Wis., was recently married to the member of the House of Representatives from her home district.

Mrs. Pamela Young Goes on Cruise

NYA Plans Health Camps For Youths

Mrs. Lane Tells Program At Mrs. Roosevelt's Press Conference

Plans for a Nation-wide health program for youth were discussed yesterday by Mrs. Roosevelt's weekly press conference. Mrs. Marie Desden Lane, director of girls' and professional projects for the National Youth Administration, explained that a program was already under way to establish two or three health camps at which young men rejected by the Selective Service because of need for medical attention could be examined and treated.

She pointed out, also, that the program—patterned after the British system—would be extended to help other youths who are either undernourished or are in need of special remedial treatment, such as removal of tonsils and general dental work.

Physical examinations already are being required of other young men whose needs have been brought to the attention of the National Youth Administration, Mrs. Lane said. But just when the health program as a whole will get under way, she did not know. Tentative plans are being made for the establishment of three centers, one each in Wisconsin, Tennessee and New York. All will be located near medical centers and their work will be carried on in connection with existing health groups.

While this project is being outlined exclusively for young men, girls also are having some definite programs worked out in their behalf, Mrs. Lane said. In this connection she mentioned that a number of young women were being trained in machine-shop work, in hospital attendant projects, and similar lines in which there is demand for service at this time.

U. S. Ability to Build First-Line Planes En Masse Doubted

to retool your factories right away for a new type embodying the lessons learned."

Wright said that tooling for mass production of automobiles takes eight to nine months every time the model is changed. The limited tooling process employed in the ever-changing aircraft industry runs only two to three months, he stated.

Replying to a question as to when America would arrive at a point where it could safely standardize warplane production, the Curtiss-Wright official said:

"Not until the other fellow does."

Others Also Testify

The committee had Wright and two other aircraft company officials before it during an all-day session of investigation into delays in plane production. Others who testified were L. B. Grumman, of the Grumman Aircraft and Engineering Corporation, and George F. Chapline, president of the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation.

All three manufacturers testified that there had been no delays in their plants because of lack of engines, propellers or instruments—purported chief bottle-necks of production. Grumman said the only delays at his plnat had been from lack of armor-plate, and that further standardization of American and British design would speed deliveries.

Wright reported that production of new scout observation planes by his company for the Navy would be delayed four months because the test period had to be lengthened to eliminate "bugs" in the new type.

Chapline said that 40 per cent of its production was "farmed out" to subcontractors and the plan worked well for them.

Vinson Takes Exception

Curtiss-Wright, however, plans to subcontract only from 10 to 15 per cent of its work, Wright stated. He said that the company "put out" fabrication of parts whenever it could get reasonable assurance the subcontractor could produce on schedule.

Vinson challenged his stand, declaring that "in times like these, the whole production capacity of the country must be utilized."

Questioned as to the advisability of ending the "Friday-to-Monday blackout" in aircraft plants, Wright said his company was working toward full 24-hour operations, six days a week. A seven-day week, however, would not allow time for machine maintenance and would "burn out" executive and supervisory personnel, he said.

All three of the aircraft chiefs said their companies had experienced no labor trouble, nor had been handicapped in obtaining subcontractors because of the Walsh-Healey Labor Standards Act.

Meanwhile, in another aerial defense development, the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics gave assurance that American aviation is more than holding its own with the European nations in plane development.

"Large Advances" Promised

Submitting the annual report of the committee, Dr. Vannevar Bush, president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, and chairman of the committee, declared that investigations carried on involving speed, maneuverability, load-carrying capacity, range, safety and economy of aircraft "definitely promise large advances."

A new type of cylinder "finning," for example, by carrying heat away rapidly from the cylinder wall, triples the horsepower of an engine. Thus, the present largest air-cooled engine can be made to develop 6,000 horsepower, instead of 2,000.

With four such engines mounted in a new superbomber so large that a man could walk upright within the wings, it would be possible to fly without difficulty to central Europe with a load of bombs, drop them and return nonstop, it is claimed.

With such power it also would be possible, experts agree, to increase the "wing loading" of a bomber sufficiently to make it almost impregnable to antiaircraft and machine-gun fire.

Division, and one company of colored infantry. Induction of the Twenty-ninth Division units has been set tentatively for February 3.

Maj. James A. Noxon, constructing quartermaster at Fort George G. Meade, Md., where the division will be trained, said recently that the camp will be ready then for Guard units of the division. However, the division commander, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, has said he did not favor induction of the Guard troops until the camp is ready for the selectees, who will almost double its strength.

Meanwhile, Washington's second January contingent of selected men entered the first phase of Army life when 17 were sent to Baltimore for induction. They reported at 7:15 a. m. and left for Baltimore by bus after being given breakfast.

Friday another 44 men, all colored, will be sent to Baltimore for induction.

Comment on G.O.P. Started Something, First Lady Admits

Tells of Press and Mailed Protests Stirred By Her Own Remarks About Reception Accorded President's Message to Congress

Yes, Mrs. Roosevelt has had plenty of response—mostly critical—since she protested the fact that the Republican contingent in Congress did not applaud the President's speech before the joint session.

At her press conference yesterday she admitted as much, and said she had received a number of letters—protesting her remarks. She said she had also noted a good deal of press comment about it, and mentioned one New York newspaper as implying that she probably did not know which were Democrats and which were Republicans in the joint session assembly.

Her conclusion was that it seemed "a little odd that one can't identify his own people in Congress."

The suoject came up near the end of a conference that touched on interpretations of the draft law as it affects married men; large initiation fees in certain labor unions, and the question of sending food to certain countries in Europe.

Mrs. Roosevelt feels strongly that there should be a uniform rule about drafting married men. She deplored the fact that the rule is being interpreted differently in different sections of the country and pointed out that if the time should ever come that married men are required to go into service for a year, those whose wives did not require their support should go first.

Mentioning her recent discovery that certain labor unions charge high initiation fees, Mrs. Roosevelt said she had been informed that the average person "does not understand what belonging to a craft union really means." Some lines of work in which a long apprenticeship is required, she explained, bring high initiation fees so that the organization can maintain a high standard and carry on "all sorts of welfare projects."

The question of whether further attempts should be made to send food to Europe came up, and Mrs. Roosevelt said she favored shipments to Finland if they could be managed. She implied that she did not believe it would be possible to get more food through to France.

Gen. Davis Goes To Fort Riley

Assignment of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, only colored general officer in Army history, to command the Fourth Cavalry Brigade at Fort Riley, Kans., was announced yesterday by the War Department. The unit is composed of the Ninth and Tenth Cavalry regiments, which are made up of white officers and colored enlisted men.

A native of the District, Gen. Davis has been an officer of the Regular Army since 1901. He now commands a colored National Guard regiment in New York. He is due to retire for age next July.

Pocketbook Thief Escapes Crowd

A 54-year-old woman was seized from behind and choked and her pocketbook was snatched last night as she walked in the 1400 block of Montague Street Northwest.

The victim, Lillian E. Miller, of 5912 Fourteenth Street Northwest, screamed as the assailant, a white man, ran to an automobile, attracting attention of passersby. Several chased the automobile through an alley, in vain. The purse contained $1.50.

Viola R. King, of 55 M Street Northwest, lost her pocketbook containing $25 to a colored man who sneaked up behind her near her home and snatched it.

Donnell Takes Governorship Fight to Court

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 13 (AP).—Forrest C. Donnell, Republican, carried his battle for the Governorship to the Supreme Court late today.

He asked a writ of mandamus ordering House Speaker Morris Osburn, Democrat, to announce the returns of the November 5 gubernatorial election and to declare him elected.

Meantime, Missouri passed up her inauguration ceremonies for the first time in history, due to the legislative order for an investigation of Donnell's close election victory.

Kansas Inaugurates

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 13 (AP).—Payne Ratner, 44-year-old Republican, was inaugurated today for his second term as Governor of Kansas, in the face of a Democratic threat to press a contest of his right to be seated.

Ratner received an official margin of only 430 votes over William H. Burke, Democrat. Charles E. Young, Democratic State chairman, said an election contest in the State Senate or a second Supreme Court suit was still seriously considered.

Georgia Asks "Accounting"

Atlanta, Jan. 13 (AP).—New Deal Democracy came to a financial accounting in Georgia today with the convening of a predominately conservative Legislature under the leadership of Eugene Talmadge, who takes office tomorrow.

For four years, under the pro-New Deal guidance of retiring Gov. E. D. Rivers, eorgia expanded her governmental services on a "Little New Deal" pattern.

Talmadge assailed what he termed "extravagance" in State affairs and campaigned on a platform demanding economy.

Tomadelli Asks Paintings' Return By FBI Agents

Jwan J. Tomadelli, inventor, art expert and orchid grower, yesterday asked the District Court to order the return of valuable paintings he said were taken from him by FBI agents who arrested him last Tuesday.

Tomadelli was held in bail of $75,000 for a commissioner's hearing on a swindling charge. Federal agents linked him with a $500,000 fraud against a New Jersey business man. Justice James W. Morris, of the District Court, called the bail "shocking" and reduced it to $15,000, whereupon Tomadelli obtained release after several days in jail.

Tomadelli's lawyer, Myron G. Ehrlich, told the court the agents searched his apartment and took over his paintings and other property.

So 546 Professionals Choose Year's 'Ten Best'

'Rebecca' Leads the List in National Voting; The Variety Club Bangs Open the New Year; This, That and the Other About the Theater

SO HERE THEY ARE. A total of 546 professional film critics, reviewers, columnists and commentators, from coast to coast and border to border of these United States, in the nineteenth national poll, conducted annually by Jack Alicoate's Film Daily, voted the following to be the "Ten Best Pictures of the Year," released between October 31, 1939, and November 1, 1940:

BELL

1. REBECCA
2. THE GRAPES OF WRATH
3. NINOTCHKA
4. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT
5. ALL THIS AND HEAVEN, TOO
6. ABE LINCOLN IN ILLINOIS
7. BOOM TOWN
8. NORTHWEST PASSAGE
9. OUR TOWN
10. THE MORTAL STORM

On Monday, December 30, an eyelash ahead of the deadline, this column published its nominations as follows, in the order named: "Our Town," "Rebecca," "The Grapes of Wrath," "Ninotchka," "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," "My Favorite Wife," "Knute Rockne—All American," "The Mortal Storm," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "Boom Town." Seven out of 10, the score seems to be.

Which just goes to show that procrastination is a terrible thing. For months we had been chortling away to the great boredom of our friends—if any—about the manifold superiorities of "All This and Heaven, Too," as interpreted on the screen by Bette Davis and Charles Boyer. Then, after it was too late, we discovered much to our chagrin that in the last minute rush we had omitted it from our list, even if it was 'way up there among the "A's" on the catalogue of 431 titles from which we had to choose. That is why we have been kicking ourself enthusiastically in the license plates ever since.

As for "Foreign Correspondent" and "Northwest Passage," we still can't go along with the rest of the boys and girls. The former we shall always feel was a "Hairbreadth Harry" subject that violated all the laws of probability for the greater part of its length. "Northwest Passage," to us, was a good, but not a best. Funny that the other 545 should have been so wrong!

On the "Honor Roll" of pictures that almost made the first 10, by the way, "Knute Rockne" was fourth, "My Favorite Wife" twelfth and "The Hunchback" sixteenth—out of a total of 53. Our average over the past eight years—which seems to be as far back as we can trace it—on the basis of a perfect 1,000 per cent, is .750, with a low of .600 and a high of .900 mixed in among the .700s and .800s. Hardly enough to get into a play-off for the pennant, but still in the first division—I hope.

Yesterday's first luncheon of the year, held by the Variety Club in the small ballroom of the Willard, in honor of John S. Allen and Max Cohen, newly appointed Washington branch exchange managers for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal pictures, respectively, was one of the most successful in the history of the showmen's organization. It started the chief barkership of Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, off with a reverberating bang. Sol Sorkin, assistant manager of Keith's, and Harry Cohen and Carlton Duffus, both of M.-G.-M., were the "kings for the day," wearing their crowns becomingly. A short but superlative entertainment program was provided by the Vass Family, from the stage bill at Loew's Capitol, and Bob Dupont, from the Earle. Juggler Dupont ate five apples yesterday, instead of his usual four, and I agree with Production Manager Harry Krivit, of the Capitol, that the Vass quintet is the most promising youth act that has come up to the boards in the past decade or so. Congratulations all around.

Today at noon, the Loew interests are going to screen something or other for the guys and gals of the drama desks. Nobody seems to know, as yet, whether it will be "Hudson's Bay" or "The Philadelphia Story," but, this once, that doesn't so much matter. The important thing is that whichever feature is squirted onto the screen, an "extra added attraction" will be the screen test that won Vivien Leigh the role of Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind." That ought to be something!

So we finally got around to seeing "Kitty Foyle," at Keith's, and would be a sucker, no less, not to agree with everybody else in the world that it is a honey of an "audience picture." Ginger Rogers, in the title role, turns in an elegant performance. But the picture's principal appeal, it seems to me, lies in the fact that there are so many Kitty Foyles in the world and so few of them who have the good sense to solve their problems so intelligently. Most of them should be named "Kitty Foiled."

Where-Are-You-Going-My-Pretty-Maid Note

Head for Siam If You Want Hollywood Job

If you're really aiming for Hollywood, start for the far corners of the earth.

That seems to be the formula that many men and women are using today to dip into that lovely hatful of money that the film producers are holding out to people who have specialized knowledge.

It is the formula, certainly, that has brought success to most of that whole army of folks in that expansive category donated by the term "Technical Adviser."

As a sample, consider the case of Dr. Eduard F. Winckler. His name is lettered on a door at Paramount, along with the title "Adviser on Indonesian Sequences." At the moment Dr. Winckler is engaged on the technical details of "Victory," the filmization of Joseph Conrad's classic, which is laid in the South Seas.

A tall, shambling Hollander, Dr. Winckler is more at home in the Dutch East Indies than anywhere else. He began out there as a doctor, became a coffee planter, then ran an export business. Now he sells his accumulated knowledge to Hollywood so that their South Seas films may be accurate technically.

Used African Detour

Hans Dreier, who is also art director at Paramount, is serving as technical adviser on "Road to Zanzibar," which takes Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour and Bob Hope on a Mirthful safari through Africa. Dreier spent years in German West Africa.

Then there's Romeo Farrell, who isn't at all what his first name would indicate. Romeo lived for years amongst the Indians on the American and Canadian reservations. He speaks a score of Indian dialects, which comes in handy when Cecil B. De Mille wants Cree speeches in the script of "Northwest Mounted Police."

Paramount reached out to Texas to pluck Ranger Pete Crawford from his post as a Texas Ranger to serve as technical expert on "Texas Rangers Ride Again," and Edward S. De Butts was recruited as the advisor to Producer-director Edward H. Griffith on "Virginia" because of his knowledge of Virginia" because of his knowledge of Virginia.

Mastery of strange arts pays dividends, too, for John Gaines got a technical job on "Love Thy Neighbor" because he knows about loaded dice, and even the horseshoe pitching champion of Montebello, Calif., Clyde Greyson, is teaching Mary Martin the art for her role in "New York Town."

5 A. M.: "Monty Woolley's advice is that, if anyone likes going to night clubs, he should concentrate on two or three," a ringsider states at the Havana-Madrid, "because then they'll know him well in those places and serve him well" . . . "Arthur Murray is changing all the phonograph records in his dance studios," an instructor reveals at Leon and Eddie's, "because he says that teaching pupils with ASCAP tunes made it difficult for them to dance at home to the BMI radio music."

Startling Picture

Said to be one of the most unusual pictures ever made, Orson Welles "Citizen Kane" deals with the colorful career of an American emperer and his ill-fated empire. Welles produced and directed the RKO Radio offering and starred in the title role.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 13 (INS).—Preston Sturges was very loathe to talk about his next picture, "Sullivan's Travels," even under cross examination, but whatever Mr. Sturges does is interesting, since he made "The Great McGinty" and "Christmas in July." So I kept quizzing him. Within the year he has become such an important addition to the screen that I consider any movie he plans news.

PARSONS

Preston is now writing the story of "Sullivan's Travels," which is that of a Hollywood director who goes into the slums of a big city to gather material for a picture. He gets into a squabble, is put in jail and cannot identify himself. Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea are in the back of the active Sturges mind for the leads and if he wants them I see no reason why either Barbara or Joel would object.

Congratulations to Richard Rowland for "Cheers for Miss Bishop." Those of us who have known Dick for these many years are indeed happy for him. Had he only made the picture sooner, he would have been an active contender for Academy honors. Fine as "Goodbye Mr. Chips" is, "Cheers for Miss Bishop," also the story of a teacher, is just as real and human and told with just as fine sentiment. Moreover, Martha Scott's performance, as the old lady, is comparable to Robert Donat's characterization which won the Academy Award.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Rudy Vallee at last got his wish to meet Gene Tierney. They were both at the Robert Stack party; Pat Dane and Al Vanderbilt dancing and dancing and still dancing at the Mocambo; chamber of commerce need not copy; Joan Leslie, Warner actress, caught cold posing as a sun goddess at the Pasadena parade and she's been sick ever since and out of her picture; Frieda Inescourt and her husband, Ben Ray Redman, writer, are celebrating their fifteenth wedding anniversary on January 30.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 13.

When you swoon over Adrian's costumes in "The Ziegfeld Girl" (which cry out to be photographed in color instead of black and white), give a sigh of pity for the beautiful girls who wear some of those headdresses, one of which weighs 50 pounds. Try balancing that on your cranium while going up and down stairs for three hours at a stretch. They're the most exquisite I've seen, and have given dozens of sewing and bead women months of work. You might have thought headdresses were made of precious jewels, they're so well done. Yet the people who make them are among the worst paid in the studio. There's one gown made entirely of pink tulle balls in different sizes.

HOPPER

You could make several dresses in the time it took to make a third of the balls. To give that nude look, they've using glass shoulder straps.

I didn't know until the other day that Judy Garland, who certainly can put over a song, can't read music. But she's learning from Dave Rose, so she'll have a keener appreciation.

She had a nice experience the other day. The girls' club at the Bancroft School, which she attended for five months, invited her over, set her up on a high stool, asked her dozens of questions, and gave her a wonderful time.

Incidentally, they're writing a picture for Judy and Gable, and in the midst of a terrific love scene, she'll spy his photograph on a table, pull away from him, look at him, and sing a chorus of the song which she made famous, "Dear Mr. Gable"—then rush right back into the shelter of his arms. And if that isn't using what's made to order, I don't know what you'd call it.

Who says actors don't like to work? Charles Coburn glories in the fact that out of a 49-day schedule on "The Devil and Miss Jones," he'll have one day off. Says Charlie, "It's the best part of my life, and I'm loving it!"

Judging by the look of Jean Arthur, she was, too. She was a little low from over-indulgence in chocolate cokies, which affect her as drink does most people. "But," says she, "they're delicious, my husband loves 'em, and I haven't the heart to keep the cook from making them, so I eat 'em, too."

"The Devil and Miss Jones" is the third original story Norman Krasna has written from his first job as shoe clerk in Macy's department store. First was "Bachelor Mother," which had a store background; "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" with Carole and Bob Montgomery was next; and now this. As Sam Wood says, he'll probably go on the rest of his life, making a fortune from one poorly paid job.

Sam may change his card to read "Producer" as well as "Director." RKO is begging him to, and he's thinking it over. He can't lose, and stands to make a great deal more. If he'd had a producer's interest in "Kitty Foyle," he could retire.

Lucille Ball is blooming, says whoever started the rumor she and Desi Arnaz were rowing, should have their mouths washed out. She's never been happier, and said, "Why didn't you tell me to get married long ago, Hopper? You know I always do what you tell me to." Oh, yeah!

Jobs Urged In Defense For Women

Guarding of Labor Gains Also Asked By Miss Anderson At Club Women's Tea

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor.

Inclusion of women in the defense training program and safeguarding of existing labor legislation were urged yesterday by Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, in a talk before members of the American Association of Women's Clubs yesterday.

Speaking at the weekly tea of the Washington Branch, Miss Anderson gave details of the conference called a short time ago by the labor advisory committee established by the women's bureau at which it was revealed that women workers were not an intregal part of the defense training program. She cited the statement of a representative of the United Automobile Workers that women workers in a Michigan city seeking employment on defense contracts with a certain firm had been denied access to the training classes being conducted in that community.

Representation Important

This firm customarily employed women, said Miss Anderson, in soldering, all kinds of assembling and running punch presses. Many of the women seeking work were thoroughly familiar with the processes, she added.

As the specific form which the training takes in each community is determined by local vocational school authorities, with the advice of committees composed of representative grouns among employers, workers and public agencies, the first step to be taken, she said, is to secure adequate representation of women on the advisory committees.

"Equally important is the establishment of proper standards for women workers," she said. "Not so long ago the bureau released its first bulletin on this subject. After noting the experiences of 1917-18 and the findings of our various industrial studies, the publication recommends certain employment conditions and plant facilities necessary to protect adequately the well-being of women workers.

Urges Guarding of Labor Gains

"Undoubtedly, an effort will be made in the name of defense during the next few months to scrap some of the gains that labor has made. During the last World War this took place. It was successful, too, and by 1917 the Governors of some of the industrial States were empowered to relax labor laws whenever they thought it advisable.

"This must not happen again. We know the folly of relaxing proper regulations. Experience during the last great conflict both at home and abroad are filled with examples of this. More recently Great Britain, after experimenting during the first year of the war, with lengthened hours of work, returned to regulations formerly in effect for women and minors."

Mothers' Health Group Seeks Funds

LAUNCH CAMPAIGN—Left to right—Mrs. Prentiss Willson, Mrs. Thomas Hepburn, James Gordon Hanes and Mrs. John L. Proctor at last night's banquet in the Sulgrave Club which launched a drive for funds by the Mothers' Health Association. Mrs. Willson is president of the association; Mrs. Proctor is chairman of the campaign. Mrs. Hepburn and Mr. Hanes were speakers at the gathering

Mrs. T. R. Hepburn Addresses Mothers' Health Association

First Line of Defense Is Being Well-Born, Well-Nourished and Educated, Film Star's Mother Declares in Interview

"Great sums are being spent to protect us from foreign invasion when actually our first line of defense is being well born, well nourished and educated," Mrs. Thomas R. Hepburn, of Hartford, Conn., said yesterday in an interview preceding her address before the Mothers' Health Association.

"Until the underprivileged members of society learn to space their children for health and spiritual well-being, we are not guarding this phase of our national defense," said Mrs. Hepburn.

Mrs. Hepburn, mother of Katharine Hepburn, of motion picture fame, presided at the dinner given by the association at the Sulgrave Club as the opening event of its 1941 drive for funds. James Gordon Hanes, of Winston-Salem, N. C., was the principal speaker.

Mr. Hanes, whose State is one of two in which birth control has been made part of the public health program, pointed out that the quality of the citizenry in a democracy directly affect the quality of government because leaders are selected from the people. In a family where there are three or four children there is greater possibility of bringing them up to be well-educated, competent American citizens, he said, and, therefore, it is of primary importance that the overproduction of the mentally and physically weak be prevented.

Mrs. Prentiss Willson, president of the association, was introduced by Mrs. Hepburn and named Mrs. John L. Proctor as head of the 1941 drive for funds.

In South Carolina, where birth control was first made part of the public health program, maternal deaths have been reduced by 30 per cent, said Mrs. Willson. A similar reduction in the maternal death rate in Washington is the goal of the local association which helped 2,339 women in 1940, she said.

About 150 members and guests of the organization attended last night's dinner, arrangements for which were in charge of Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss.

Among those present were: Mrs. Dean G. Acheson, Mrs. Theodore Achilles, Miss Esther M. Behrend, Dr. and Mrs. Harry S. MRS. EDNA KNIGHT GASCH, president of the National League of American Pen Women, yesterday afternoon entertained at a reception from 4 to 6 at her home, 1638 R Street Northwest, in honor of the eighty-eighth birthday anniversary of her mother, Mrs. Ella S. Knight.

The affair was a surprise for the guest of honor and members of the Sunshine and Community Society, which she founded 28 years ago, comprised the company of friends Mrs. Gasch had invited for the occasion. A large basket of flowers was presented Mrs. Knight as a gift from the society.

Mrs. W. W. Deal is now president of the organization, which still carries on welfare work, devoting itself to the purpose for which it was formed by Mrs. Knight—to spread sunshine in the community. A large proportion of the 90 members to which the club list is limited, were present yesterday to pay tribute to its founder.

Mrs. Knight usually goes to Florida for the winter but this season is remaining, at least for the present, in the Capital. Last week she entertained Chapter L of the P. E. O. Sisterhood, of which she is a member, at its regular meeting. She continues her interest also in Constitution Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, of which she is a past regent, and belongs to the State Officers Club of the D. A. R. In former years she was affiliated with other organizations also but now confines her club work to these.

FOOD FROM HOME—An All-Washington-and-Alaska menu (and not Washington, D. C., either) will be served tomorrow night at the opening function of the season for the Washington State and Alaska Society at the Cairo Hotel.

Two hundred pounds of fresh Puget Sound salmon will provide the main course for the dinner. Potatoes and canned peas are being provided by Delegate Anthony J. Dimond, of Alaska. These are coming from the famed Matanuska project. Peas are also being sent from the Walla Walla section, oysters from Olympia, fresh crab meat from Grays Harbor, Wash., apples from Yakima and Wenatchee, tomatoes and cherries from King County, sugar from Toppenish, wine and lettuce from Seattle. Such ingredients as salt and lard also are being sent from the State.

The foodstuffs are being rushed across the continent by express.

Justice and Mrs. W. O. Douglas and members of the Washington State delegation in the Senate and House and the Delegate from Alaska will be guests of honor at the dinner. Justice Douglas, a former resident of Washington State, will make a short address, while transcribed greetings from Gov. Arthur Langlie and Miss Gale Page, of radio and screen, will be presented. Miss Page is formerly from Spokane, Wash. Moving pictures of the recently created Olympic National Park, Washington State, will be shown after the dinner and dancing will follow.

J. J. Underwood, 3020 Tilden Street Northwest, is president of the society.

JUNIORS MEET—The Junior Alliance yesterday afternoon had its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Carlton C. Duffus, 2601 Calvert Street, with Mrs. Dean Spitler as cohostess.

Plans for the "big party" of the year were discussed and the president, Mrs. Daniel Wathey, appointed Mrs. Baldwin Cooke as chairman of literature and current affairs to form a study group on these subjects.

At Christmas the club provided toys and fruit for three needy families and gave a party for the children of Thomson School, the members donating toys individually for this occasion.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Rolad Dulin at 2001 Sixteenth Street Northwest on the second Monday of February.

Mrs. Leland Jackson Stump and Mrs. Baldwin Cooke, daughter of Mrs. Daniel, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs, will alternate pouring tea.

Mrs. Robert Harvey, chairman of music, will present Miss Georgia Washington, accordion soloist.

C. I. O. Calls Sacrifice Plea 'Slave Doctrine'

Katz Demands Pay Rise Proportionate With Gain in Profits

The doctrine of sacrifice in the national emergency will be accepted by labor only after workers' wages are permitted to increase proportionately with profits of employers, a C. I. O. spokesman asserted here yesterday.

"The doctrine of sacrifice when preached at labor today is a vicious slave doctrine . . ." Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer, Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council (C. I. O.) told the Council of Social Agencies at the January meeting, in the Y. W. C. A.

Robert J. Watts, international representative of the A. F. of L., told the same audience "that our first task today is to participate to the maximum of our capacity in bringing about the overthrow of the slave masters of central Europe."

Defense "Urgent Program"

"May I say with conviction that I regard the national defense as being today by far the greatest and most urgent social welfare program we could possibly devote ourselves," to which Watts said.

There is no real danger of Fascism or Nazism here "if we can help accomplish the defeat and destruction of the main generating plants abroad," Watts continued. "Most of our active Fifth Columnists would either lose their enthusiasm as soon as the pay checks from headquarters stop or would fizzle out as soon as the source of their ideas was cut off," he said.

Katz said: "Organized business insisted for months that it would not accept any defense contracts unless it received what it said was to be its fair profits. This holdup of defense orders, this strike if you will, was never denounced by people in high places and in fact was cooperated with by the very persons who denounced labor for asking 5 cents per hour more.

"The doctrine of sacrifice when preached at labor today is a vicious slave doctrine and has been very well expressed by a recent editorial in a Baltimore paper which said that the purpose of labor in this emergency is merely to see that defense activities proceed smoothly. That is the purpose of peons, not of free men," Katz said.

To Safeguard Standards

Labor, he said, will continue to safeguard American democracy by protecting its living standards and fighting against antidemocratic tendencies at home. Hitlerism by any other name smells just the same whether you call it a loan-lease plan giving dictatorship powers to one man, who is called Roosevelt, or whether you give it to somebody else with a different name, Katz asserted.

Miss Margaret Buffum, president, District of Columbia Woman's Trade Union League, said her organization was working on a bill to obtain some manner of minimum hours for domestic employes, who are the largest worker group here outside of the Federal service. Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, president of the council, presided.

The message said Antonescu will set out today.

Two Plans to Avoid Strikes On Defense Work Studied

Proposals Offered by Leiserson And Hillman as Alternatives to Law Prohibiting Walkouts by Labor

Two proposals to prevent strikes in defense industries, both involving the principle of mediation, were broached by Federal agencies yesterday.

The first, advocated by Dr. William M. Leiserson, of the National Labor Relations Board, contemplated machinery similar to the Railway Labor Act as a substitute for a "no strike" law.

The second envisaged expansion of an experimental plan, conducted under the auspices of Sidney Hillman, in which Government mediators, taken from the ranks of organized labor, would act as "trouble shooters" in any threatened dispute.

Indicating that he placed no faith in the efficacy of legislation to outlaw strikes, Leiserson proposed that the Government call labor and management together to consider voluntary methods for handling grievances.

Similar to Railway Act

Under a plan similar to the Railway Labor Act, he indicated, both employers and employes would give 30 days' notice of any intention to change, or ask for a change, of wages and working conditions. Within 10 days of such notice both would be required to agree on a time and place of conference.

While the conference was pending, both sides would be obliged to maintain wages and conditions in status quo until an agreement on revision has been reached. The Labor Board member suggested that a Federal Mediation Board of three or five members be created, to which either side could appeal if there was failure to reach agreement.

Associates of Hillman, newly appointed associate director general of the Office of Production Management, emphasized that the basis of the mediation plan being considered by that organization lay in equal representation by C. I. O. and A. F. of L. officials, constituting a force of field adjudicators on Hillman's staff. This group, consisting perhaps of 10 representatives of each of the two major divisions of organized labor, would be called into action at the first word of a pending dispute.

Plan Tried on Small Scale

This arrangement, it was learned, has been tried out on a small scale in several experimental "control" situations. Out of 241 "tries" in controversial labor situations in defense industries, labor stoppages were prevented in 238 cases, and in the remainder strikes lasted from but four to seven days, officials said.

Key figures in the plan have been John R. Owens, head of the Ohio District Council of the C. I. O. United Mine Workers; Joseph Keenan, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and Edwin Branson, American Vanadium Corporation president, all on Hillman's staff. Where a C. I. O. union was involved, the C. I. O. official acted as mediator, and the A. F. of L. officers took a similar part in an A. F. of L. case. Branson's efforts were devoted to situations where appeals to the employer were considered essential.

Officials on Hillman's staff insisted that the heads of both labor organizations would be consulted before any appointments to the field staffs were made, and that if a top executive were considered necessary to coordinate the program, he would be a "neutral," an outsider, or perhaps a member of the railroad brotherhoods.

Six Hurt in Michigan Strike Riot, Defense Aides Step In

Intensive efforts to end a strike and labor violence in a Saginaw, Mich., plane parts factory working on defense orders, was undertaken yesterday by the National Labor Relations Board and labor aides of the Defense Commission.

The dispute, which resulted in the injury yesterday of six police officers before 200 Michigan State troopers were called to restore order, grew out of rival claims of the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. United Automobile Workers for representation at the Wilcox-Rich plant of the Eaton Manufacturing Co. The plant fabricates valve seats for planes on a defense subcontract.

Although about 300 workers returned to their jobs after order was restored. Federal labor officials feared that the C. I. O.'s strike call might extend to five other Eaton Co. plants, also working on aviation material. At the same time, they faced a strike threat from the same union at the Ryan Aeronautical Co. plant in San Diego, Calif.

NLBR to Hold Hearings

Officials in the office of Sidney Hillman, labor member of the Defense Commission, said that Joseph Keenan, A. F. of L. official, and John R. Owens, of the C. I. O., both on Hillman's staff, were in constant touch with the unions at Saginaw and hoped for a quck settlement.

The Labor Board, which speeded its procedure since trouble first threatened some weeks ago, will hold hearings today on the C. I. O. union's contention that the existing A. F. of L. agreement with the company was not validated and that since its execution a majority of the workers have shifted allegiance.

Police officers at the plant were injured yesterday morning when they attempted, with tear gas and club swinging, to disperse a group of 200 pickets. Six pickets, including Linwood Smith U. A. W.-C. I. O. regional director, were arrested.

The strike, voted for in Cleveland Saturday, involved 1,100 workers at the Saginaw plant.

Coast Strike Vote Today

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 14 (AP).—Labor contract negotiations between the Ryan Aeronautical Co., which holds contracts for Government planes and the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers have been "broken off" and appointment of a conciliator asked by the company. In Los Angeles, Wyndham Mortimer, international representative of the union, said a strike vote would be taken tomorrow.

Richard T. Frankenstein, chief negotiator for the union, said the U. A. W. had withdrawn its union shop demand and that the dispute now rested solely on its request for an increase in the minimum hourly wage from 50 to 75 cents.

Ryan, engaged in a $10,000,000 order from the Government for primary training planes for the Army Air Corps, employs 1,200 men.

Frankenstein said the company in a counter proposal had suggested a 50-cent minimum hourly wage, with a 4-cent boost at the end of four months, and another 4-cent increase at the end of eight months.

British Concerns Offer Highest Bid For 20 U. S. Ships

The J. H. Winchester Co., New York, acting for nine British Empire concerns, submitted to the Maritime Commission yesterday a high bid of $4,611,650 for the purchase of 20 vessels from the Government's laid-up fleet.

No individual bidder offered to buy more than seven of the 21 vessels offered. The United States Lines, closest rival to the Winchester Co. in the bidding, offered $1,238,385 for five of the ships.

The Maritime Commission announced it had concluded contracts for the construction of three shipyards at a cost of $14,233,000, as the first step in building 200 merchant vessels in the program of all aid to Great Britain. The commission is negotiating contracts for construction of an additional four shipyards. The latter group of yards will cost about $20,000,000.

The three new shipyards will be located at Portland, Oreg., Los Angeles, and Houston, Tex., while the four additional yards will be built at New Orleans, Mobile, Ala., Wilmington, N. C., and Baltimore.

Commuters' Rates Cut on Havre Span

Ticket Book Buyers To Have Costs Sliced To 3 Cents a Trip

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13.—Gov. O'Conor announced tonight adoption by the State Roads Commision of special commutation rates on the Susquehanna River toll bridge which would reduce the present toll to 3 cents a trip for passenger cars.

The Governor said he was advised by the commission that the new rate, available to anyone purchasing special 60-day and 120-day ticket books, had been approved by the consulting engineers representing bridge bondholders. The new ticket books will go on sale before the end of January.

Present tools on the bridge start from a 20-cent minimum for passenger cars. Under the new schedule, the commutation rates will be available only to persons purchasing the ticket books. A new reduced rate scale for the general motoring public has not yet been set.

The Governor obviously surprised at the drastic nature of the reduction, said he had been formally asked to approve the 3-cent fare and "will do so with great pleasure."

Originally, the commutation idea was developed by the State to help residents of Harford and Cecil Counties, some of whom use the Susquehanna span many times daily. A survey of the volume of local traffic, recently completed by engineers, was used as the basis for the ticket-book plan.

On the Potomac River toll bridge, sister span to the Susquehanna, the minimum rate is 40 cents, plus additional fares for passengers. The new Susquehanna rate contemplates no additional charge for extra passengers, the Governor said.

Gilbert, First Simon Legree Actor, Buried

Former Broadway Star Dies at 80 in Georgetown Hospital

Services for Charles Reid Gilbert, 80, actor who played Simon Legree in the original production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," were held here yesterday, with burial in Glenwood Cemetery.

MR. GILBERT

Mr. Gilbert died Monday in Georgetown Hospital after a long illness. He had lived in Fort Myer Heights, Arlington, Va., since retiring from the stage in 1923 after an acting career of nearly 40 years.

Washington audiences saw him last in the role of the judge in "On Trial" at the National Theater shortly before the World War. At the height of his career he appeared in leading roles of numerous Broadway and road productions. He spent several seasons in companies with such actors as Chauncey Alcott, Sol Smith Russell and Robert Downing, William S. Hart, Lewis Stone and Dustin Farnum.

It was ironical that Gilbert, whose father was a large slaveholder in Rockbridge County, Va., became identified in the minds of such a large part of the American and Canadian public as the slave-driving Simon Legree.

He often said that he had never seen but one slave owner who even approached Legree in cruelness; that all others were the acme of kindness.

Son of Chapman Johnson Gilbert and Margaret Ann Brads Gilbert, he grew up on his father's plantation near Natural Bridge during the reconstruction. He experienced all the hardships of the times in helping to restore the land to productivity.

When he was 20 years old his ambition to become an actor took him to Cincinnati, where he worked with road companies. It was a hazardous life, and he usually carried a pair of revolvers with him.

He married Katherine Argyle Martin, of Cincinnati, who appeared with him in some productions. Their daughter, now Mrs. Ada Vanden Rhodes, of Bradenton, Fla., frequently played child parts with her parents. Mrs. Gilbert died about five years ago at their Virginia home.

Mr. Gilbert's early acting attracted the attention of Daniel Frohman, David Belasco and John Drew, who brought him to New York, coached him and sent him on the way to a successful career.

He also composed several songs. One of them, "Oblivion," enjoyed considerable popularity.

Surviving, in addition to his daughter, are three brothers, Thomas Edward Gilbert, of Arlington, and Henry Wyatt Gilbert and Asa Leigh Gilbert, both of Washington.

Army Buys 26th Yacht For Defense

J. H. Pew's Egeria Goes To U. S. for $72,500; Four Purchased for $4

The Army announced yesterday that it had purchased the yacht Egeria from J. Howard Pew for $72,500, the twenty-sixth such pleasure craft to be converted to the grim business of defense in the last four months.

Twenty-two of the ocean-going "luxury ships" cost the Government $2,468,000, while the other four became United States property for a total of $4. Four patriotic-minded citizens turned over their yachts for the nominal sum of $1 each.

The ships so acquired were Maj. Edward Bowes' Edmar, W. P. Murphy's Intrepid, Joseph Seaman's Savitar, and A. Loomis' Katoura. Like the others, they will be fitted out as submarine chasers, gunboats and miscellaneous craft.

In buying the 291-ton Egeria for use as a passenger ship plying between the mainland and Fort Slocum, lying on an island in Long Island Sound, the War Department announced that no other ship was to be had in the New York City area that was suitable.

Among the yachts sold to the Navy were Harold S. Vanderbilt's Vara, for $125,000; Norman Woolworth's Noparo, which brought $180,000; W. B. Thompson's Alder, $275,000; the Orion, bought from the estate of J. Forstmann for $240,000, and H. E. Manville's Hi-Esmaro, sold for $150,000.

Others include: Col. Edward A. Deeds' Lotosland, $140,000; Max C. Fleischman's Haida, $75,000; Burtha Fisher's, Nakhoda, $155,000; Leon Mandel's Buccaneer, $90,000; J. B. Berryman's Colleen, $80,000; Livingston Short's Stella Polaris, $60,000; Clifford Hemphill's Pegasus, $50,000; the Samona II, bought from the estate of Willitts J. Snow Forecast Here Tonight; Cold Hits East

Arctic Wave Moving From New England; Rain Slated for Dixie

The Weather Bureau last night saw bad weather ahead for Washington. Today it will be colder and cloudier, and tonight and tomorrow the outlook is for snow or freezing.

This turn from the mild temperatures of recent days is caused by a cold wave moving down the Atlantic Coast from Newfoundland, it was said. The cold last night had already tumbled temperatures far below the freezing mark in New England and New York State.

Subzero temperatures were recorded in many sections. Fort Plain, N. Y., had a 3 below reading; Utica, 2 below; Syracuse, zero, and Ticonderoga, 3 below.

In the New Hampshire White Mountains temperatures as low as 22 below, and a northwest gale, were reported.

The temperature was 11 degrees above in Bosion shortly before midnight, and the mercury was falling at the rate of two degrees an hour. In New York the reading was 20 degrees above at 11 p. m., and a low of 15 was expected by this morning.

Widespread rains were in prospect across the southern tier of States. From east Texas to northern Florida, occasional rains were predicted for the Gulf States without much change in temperature.

In Washington the mercury hovered between 44 and 32 yesterday. The temperature was expected to drop to 24 by this morning.

Study Group to Meet

The study group of the Prince Georges County League of Women Voters will discuss the county health department at a meeting tomorrow at the University of Maryland. The meeting, which will start at 1 p. m., will be open to the public.

MIDSHIPMEN FROM WASHINGTON AMONG THE MEMBERS OF THE NAVAL ACADEMY SENIOR CLASS WHICH IS TO BE GRADUATED FEBRUARY 7

Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

The War Department is hiring between 4,000 and 5,000 new employes each week. Approximately 350 stenographers and typists are being put to work each week in Washington alone. In the last seven months War has added 131,000 workers, of whom 11,500 have been in Washington. All new employes must be certified from Civil Service. The department is at a peacetime record of 180,000 civilian employes, about twice its normal number. End of the mass hiring isn't in sight. Estimates of the number of additional employes that will be needed run into the tens of thousands. Heath Onthank, civilian personnel director, last week put 30 employes on a night shift in order to keep his office up to date on personnel changes.

As revealed here last week, the department is setting up 10 branch personnel offices in the field to speed up the hiring of employes. Onthank has established a personnel training course in which employes are instructed on procedures before they are sent to field offices. Three courses already have been held and they have proved so successful that it is planned to continue them "for the duration."

Agriculture Department sees to it that conditions and privileges of employment are carefully explained to each new employe. A personnel officer recently was explaining about annual leave, how it accumulates, how it is charged, how to apply for it, and every other detail he could think of. When he finished a new employe seriously inquired: "That's all very interesting," he said, "but how much vacation do I get?"

Railroad Retirement Board has been working a group of temporary employes seven full days a week. Officials promise the excessive overtime will stop this week. Reason: the employes will be dismissed. The work has been on prior service records of railroad workers . . . Dr. Winfred Overholser, St. Elizabeths Hospital superintendent, took a crack at the Civil Service Commission in his annual report. He said: "The problem of recruiting personnel for filling vacancies is becoming increasingly difficult, primarily due to the delays in securing eligibles from the Civil Service Commission." The doctor apparently is headed for more trouble as the 1942 budget would give him several hundred additional employes.

After a slow start, National Youth Administration is being brought more and more into the national defense picture. Administrator Aubrey Williams is understood to be trying to get $25,000,000 additional to expand the agency's training program for defense jobs. The proposed appropriation is understood to have the full support of National Defense Commission's labor division, whose officials are reported to have a much higher respect for NYA than they once had. However, those officials still believe NYA and CCC should be merged. NYA is building up its personnel section. Recent additions are Mark Odell, formerly of Agriculture; Irving L. Posner of ICC, and Ralph E. Smiley and Arthur L. Tackman, both transferred here from the field.

Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard should be a cinch for reappointment. The three great farm organizations, the Grange, American Farm Bureau, and the Farmers' Union, all are back of him . . . Three hundred temporary Census employes will get separation notices tomorrow . . . Frederic L. Kirgis, whose hobby is toy trains, has transferred from Interior to Justice, where he'll be the Government's counsel on the North Platte River case . . . Carl C. Berger, GAO employe, will start a new radio program for Federal employes tomorrow night at 10:15 o'clock over WINX. Guest speakers will be Civil Service Commissioner Arthur Flemming and AFGE President Jim Burns.

The oldest Michigander in the Federal service here in point of service is being hunted by the Michigan State Society. The old-timer will be honored at a banquet and dance a week from tonight at 2400 Sixteenth Street. Michigan's new Governor, Murray D. Van Waggoner, will be guest of honor. The oldest Michigander found so far is Ralph Chappell, of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, who has spent 51 years in the Government . . . New officers of the Federal Society of Translators: John McCall, president; Cecile Sughrue, vice president; G. W. Hollinger, treasurer; Pierre Pallamary, recording secretary, and Alice Van A. Alexander, corresponding secretary.

Symphony Gets Permission To Broadcast ASCAP Tunes

LADIES LEARN THEIR PART—Joseph P. Davies, chairman of the Inauguration Committee, yesterday told members of the National Women's Democratic Club their duties. At the luncheon, Mrs. Claude Pepper sat next to Mr. Davies

Blanket Authorization, First Granted, Is Extended for Inaugural Period; 'Natchez on the Hill' to Be Heard

The National Symphony Orchestra yesterday received blanket permission from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to broadcast ASCAP tunes in the Inauguration period, without becoming entangled in the organization's war over radio song rights.

Miss Stevens

At the same time it was announced President Roosevelt will worship in St. John's Episcopal Church on Lafayette Square at 10:30 a. m. on the day of his third inaugural as he has done on the previous two.

The President urged that Americans everywhere attend church in services of worship which will include a minute of silent prayer, said Chairman Joseph Davies, of the Inaugural Committee.

The radio truce extended the National Symphony—first granted by ASCAP—was offered by Gene Buck, president of the organization, "in connection with the inaugural ceremonies," according to Davies.

Buck wired Kindler the permission after the latter had asked that the symphony be allowed to play John Powell's "Natchez on the Hill," an ASCAP number, in an inaugural broadcast Sunday evening.

Comedian Eddie Cantor, Ethel Barrymore and Raymond Massey, actors, and Miss Rise Stevens, Metropolitan Opera star, will all appear in the inaugural gala program in Constitution Hall Sunday at 8:45 p. m., the committee announced.

Others expected to be on the gala program include Irving Berlin, Charlie Chaplin, Nelson Eddy, Mickey Rooney and Robert Sherwood.

A second concert with leading colored musicians has been arranged for Monday at 8 p. m. in the departmental auditorium, the committee said.

Admission for the Monday evening concert will be free, but seats can be reserved in advance and held until 7:45 p. m. Monday through Emory Smith, chairman of the special entertainment committee, at 1707 Second Street Northwest.

Among the performers will be Ann Wiggins Brown, who played in "Porgy and Bess," the Southernaires, radio quintet; Louis von Jones, violin instructor at Howard University; Carroll Brice, contralto soloist at St. George's Episcopal Church; Clyde Barrie, staff artist for the Columbia Broadcasting System, and Kenneth Spencer, of Los Angeles.

Davies addressed a luncheon meeting of the Women's National Democratic Club, 1526 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, yesterday.

Seal Urges Post of City Prosecutor

One Way to Curb Traffic Violations, Piney Branch Citizens Are Told

Elwood Seal, former corporation counsel for the District, last night called for the establishment of the office of city prosecutor as an effective means of following through The Washington Post's traffic safety drive.

At a meeting of the Piney Branch Citizens Association, he quoted the letter on the front page of Sunday's Post pleading for safety action, and placed much of the blame for the city's high traffic accident rate on the Police Court.

He saw a need for a municipal attorney to prosecute violations of city regulations, with functions similar to that of the District Attorney in Federal courts. The "city prosecutor" also should be furnished a staff sufficient to "crack down" on traffic law violators who cause most of the District's accidents, he added.

His experience as corporation counsel had convinced him, he said, that the present arrangement of having municipal cases prosecuted by that office cannot be successful and should be augmented by a full-time staff.

The police courts also are being used now as "training grounds" for District judges, Seal pointed out, urging that more seasoned prosecutors and judges be used on municipal cases.

The former corporation counsel, who is also president of the Piney Branch association, announced that he will appoint a committee later this week to study his proposals and present the plan to the District government.

As another method of lowering the traffic accident rate, S. T. Cameron urged that fines of $100 be levied on violators of speed and other traffic violations.

Glenn Simmon, assistant corporation counsel for the District, outlined the Washington setup, calling it "fair and equitable on the whole, with one exception:"

"The only defect I see in the District tax law is the provision exempting those who work here but are legally domiciled elsewhere from paying the income tax," he said.

One-sixth of the District's residents claim legal citizenship elsewhere, he pointed out.

Northeast Washington

National representation for the District was indorsed last night by the Northeast Washington Citizens Association in a resolution backing the proposed Summers suffrage amendment.

The association also approved action by the District Commissioners in surveying an estimated $1,500,000 of tax-exempt property in the city, much of which is alledgedly used for commercial purposes.

Members urged that M Street Northeast be repaired and relighted between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets.

National Gateway

National Gateway citizens last night indorsed the recommendation of James V. Bennett, superintendent of penal institutions, that the National Training School for Boys be removed from the District to a point more centrally located in the United States.

The school is intended to be used as a juvenile penal institution for the whole country and should therefore be more accessible to the West and Midwest, it was pointed out.

A committee was appointed to represent the association in the crosstown bus hearing in the District Building February 11. It includes Walter S. Ahlberg, N. M. Murrah, L. M. Green, Everett Evans, president, and Mrs. Marie C. Nold.

Members also urged formation of a Police Boys Club for their Northeast area, and reiterated their request for a playground for the community.

Six new members were admitted at the meeting.

West End

The West End Association last night opposed the closing of eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets Northwest below the new Interior Building. The move has been proposed to provide sites for new Pan American Union buildings.

Members asked that $35,000 be included in the school budget this year for plans to be drawn for the relocated Wilson Teachers College. They also urged that students who have no legal residence in the District be required to pay tuition.

The proposed bill to legalize horse racing in Washington was discussed and leaders of pro and con factions were appointed as a committee to report at the next meeting. They are John F. Kelley and Paul Sweet.

Plans were laid by the association for its annual banquet to be held on the second Monday in May.

Burleith

More than 350 members of the Burleith Citizens Association held a special "recovenanting" meeting last night and signed covenants affecting 166 properties in their area.

The meeting climaxed two years of legal preparation by a committee headed by Geoffrey Creyke to prepare the covenant papers.

Approximately half of the properties in the Northwest area bounded by Thirty-fifth, Thirty-ninth and T Streets and Reservoir Road will be affected by papers signed at the meeting, to be in force for 20 years. Present regulations will expire this year.

Park View

The Park View Citizens Association signed up 25 new members at its meeting last night, an all-time record.

The additions brought the organization's total membership to more than 300, according to B. J. Kroger, president.

The association also indorsed the Cleveland Park Citizens Association's efforts to obtain cross-town bus service.

Election of new officers was postponed until the next meeting, February 10.

Japan's Trade In Americas Held Overrated

Will Menace U. S. Only if Axis Wins, G. W. U. Parley Told

Only an Axis victory in Europe can make Japan a menace to the United States in Latin America, and then only according to the dictates of a triumphant Germany, the fourth Pan-American conference of George Washington University was told here last night.

In an address before 500 persons in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium, William C. Johnstone, jr., dean of G. W. U. junior college and an authority on Japanese affairs, offered statistics to show that Japanese trade competition in South and Central America has been overemphasized, that actually in the peak years of 1936-37 Japan's share of sales south of the Rio Grande was only 3.7 per cent, and imports only 2 per cent.

John I. B. McCulloch, editor of the Pan American News, said that the war in Europe has helped solidify the Americas. He pointed out that foreign military missions were being eliminated from Latin America and being replaced with North American missions, and that various attempts were being made to solve economic problems created by the war.

Full membership of Canada in the Pan American Union was urged by Harry W. Frantz, United Press newspaperman and writer on Latin-American activities.

Tonight at 8 the conference, sponsored by the university's inter-American center, will hear Lieut. Col. Matthew B. Ridgeway, of the Army general staff, on "The American Aspect of New World Defense;" Robert G. Caldwell, former Minister to Bolivia, on "The Significance of Pan-Americanism Today," and George E. Quisenberry, vice president, Business Publishers International Corporation, on "New Commercial Geography of Latin America."

Lieut. Col. Ridgeway will speak in place of Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, who cancelled his scheduled address because of the pressure of military duties. A panel discussion will follow the talks.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend presents Arthur Rubinstein, pianist, and Zlatko Balokovicz, violinist (Earl Wild at the piano) Monday morning in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom.

Zlatko Balokovicz, Croatian violinist, and Arthur Rubinstein, Polish pianist, shared the program yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's 120th Musical Morning, the second in the current series. Neither of the artists was a stranger in Washington, a fact which was manifest in the heartiness of the welcome extended to them. Both are musicians of superior attainments in technique and both have a persuasive way in interpretation, so that the joint recital was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience.

Mr. Balocovicz began his part of the program conservatively and conventionally with a Bach adagio and Kreisler's arrangement of a Mozart rondo. Thereafter he consulted only his own preference, with the result that one heard some interesting and unfamiliar pieces, such as Smetana's "From My Home," Manojlovic's "Lament," Fran Lhotka's "Croatian Rhapsody" and Ralph Siegel's transcription of Schumann's "Cascade." By no means threadbare were his offerings, Novacek's "Perpetual Motion" and Szymanovski's "The Fountain of Arethusa."

His technical skill was in default only in the matter of some uncertain harmonics. Otherwise his tone had a penetrative eloquence and emotional warmth, thanks to firm bowing. His playing had fire of a genuine poetic quality, particularly in the Slavic music for which he has native affinity. His collaborator at the piano, Earl Wild, is a young accompanist of notable talent and excellent taste, whose career one will watch with expectations.

Mr. Rubinstein confined himself almost entirely to conservatory repertoire. A Brahms group contained an intermezzo, a capriccio and a rhapsody and a Chopin group included the barcarolle, the C sharp minor nocturne and the A flat major polonaise. From these limitations there was a slight release in his last Spanish group, the "Quejas" of Granados, the "Navarra" of Albeniz, and a dance from Falla's "Il Sombrero de Tres Picos."

One forgave his narrow range of selection for the sake of his luminous readings. Would that there were more pianists who can shoot such rays of light into the harmonic depths of Brahms and illumine the themes of crystalline clarity.

D.C.Seeks Land For Northeast Road System

Commissioners Act To Complete Program In Condemnation Suit

Land needed to complete the highway system in the Northeast section of Washington was sought by the District Commissioners in a suit filed in the District Court yesterday.

The Commissioners said in their condemnation suit that they wished to carry out the plan as prescribed by an Act of Congress in 1893.

The proposed improvements were:

Extension of Southern Avenue between East Capitol Street and the northeast boundary of the District.

Extension of Sixty-third Street between Eastern Avenue and Southern Avenue.

Extension of Clay Street between Sixty - second and Sixty - third Streets.

The District Court was asked to empanel a jury to determine how much the District must pay the owners of the land proposed to be taken for the new streets.

Keystone Auto Club Thanks Tax Assessor

The Keystone Automobile Club yesterday expressed its thanks to Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent and the Board of Personal Tax Appraisers for "their fine cooperative spirit" in adopting a new tax assessment method which, club officials said, will save District officials $75,000 a year.

Under the new arrangement car appraisals are fixed at 15 per cent above the cash or loan value of the car instead of 25 per cent above, the rate used last year.

D. C. Court Delay to Be Bar's Topic

Critical Discussion Of Failure to Clear Congested Docket Expected Tonight

By Dillard Stokes.
Post Staff Writer

Critical discussion of the District Court's long delay in handling business is expected from members of the District Bar Association at their regular meeting at the Mayflower Hotel at 8 tonight.

The court's delays were deplored as "a denial of justice" by a bar association committee more than two years ago. The committee's recommendations that the judges work more have not been followed.

The court's failure to make substantial progress in getting its business up to date was brought to light last week with the announcement of performance for the last six months of 1940. While the court was disposing of 953 cases in that period, there were 2,134 filed in the clerk's office.

Justice Oscar R. Luhring, who is both pretrial and assignment justice and hears cases in his spare time, said in announcing the report that he saw little hope for improvement before the judicial vacations begin July 1.

Only Five Justices Available

Justice Luhring found that only 5 of the 12 justices ordinarily are available to wrestle with the congested civil docket. Of these, Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat is mostly occupied with condemnation cases, which are only a small percentage of the court's business.

The junior bar section of the District Bar Association in 1938 named a special committee on the state of the District Court's calendar.

The special committee reported that after a case was ready for trial, which usually takes several months, it faced a delay of 20 months to two years. That was in 1938. Now the estimated delay is 12 to 16 months.

"This delay creates more delay," said the committee. "The trial of cases involving transactions and occurrences of two to three years past is necessarily more protracted than a trial in which the events were fresh in the minds of witnesses and counsel."

Need for Leadership Cited

Contributing to the delay, said the 1938 committee, was the fact that no single judge or administrative officer had the responsibility for the condition of the court's business.

"If progress is to be made," said the report, "aggressive leadership from the bench is necessary. A court of 12 justices, even without congestion needs, in the opinion of the committee, executive direction and cooperative action, to keep abreast of current business; and with the existence of congestion such direction and cooperation are imperative."

The justices of the court receive $10,000 yearly and are supplied with secretaries, the aid of the court's two law clerks and various small conveniences, including reserved parking space at Judiciary Square.

G. S. Miller, Jr., 71, Retires as National Mammal Curator

Gerrit S. Miller, jr., 71, curator of mammals at the National Museum, retired yesterday after 42 years' service with the museum, 31 as curator.

But that does not mean he will quit work. Free from administrative duties, Miller will continue his research activity as an associate in biology at Smithsonian Institution.

A native of Peterboro, N. Y., Miller came here fololwing graduation from Harvard University in 1898. Since then he has won a world-wide reputation as an authority on mammals. In 1934 he was awarded the Joseph Leidy Medal for his studies. He has published more than 400 monographs and scientific articles. He makes his home at 2810 Adams Mill Road Northwest.

Succeeding Miller will be Dr. Remington Kellogg, who came to the museum in 1928 as assistant curator.

Confederate Unit To Hold Exercises

The birthdays of three leaders of the South will be commemorated at exercises tonight in Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont Avenue Northwest.

Matthew Fontaine Maury, celebrated as "the pathfinder of the seas," who was born January 14, 1806; Gen. Robert E. Lee, born January 19, 1807, and "Stonewall" Jackson, born January 21, 1824, will be honored.

Senator Charles O. Andrews, of Florida, will give the memorial address. Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr., president of the District of Columbia Division, United Daughtres of the Confederacy, will introduce the speaker.

Fingerprinting of Gun Owners Urged by Curran

Fingerprinting of every person who applies for permission to buy a firearm here was urged yesterday by District Attorney Edward M. Curran.

Curran said in a letter to the Commissioners that applicants are now obliged to fill out a long questionnaire, so officials can find out whether they have been in prison. Curran suggested that the fingerprints would be a better guide to this information.

Draft Board Member Gets Pet Alligator

Members of local Draft Board No. 6 take their work seriously. Board member Dr. E. Otto Peters yesterday received an 11-inch alligator from the swamps of Florida, a present from the board chairman, Michael Kapneck, vacationing there. Peters has named his amphibian "Home Defense."

Defendant Robbed, Judge Lets Him Off

Because the defendant had been "rolled" of $16 while intoxicated, Police Court Judge Walter T. Casey yesterday suspended sentence against a 34-year-old colored man.

A policeman testified he believed the defendant, Joseph Buchanan, had been robbed of the money while asleep.

Dozen Flee Apartments In Seventh Street Fire

An overheated gas stove was blamed for the fire yesterday in the basement of 1111 Seventh Street Northwest, which routed a dozen persons from their apartments. Damage was estimated by firemen at $25, after two alarms were sounded.

Dodson Wins Oakland Golf Play-Off With 71

New York, Jan. 13.—Daniel Reed (Dan) Topping, 29-year-old president, principal owner and manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers professional football team, was ordered today by his local draft board in Greenwich, Conn., to appear for a physical examination preparatory to induction into a year's military training. Topping announced he would probably appeal the board's action, adding that he did not know who could take over the business management of the Dodgers if he had to go to camp

The same draft board ordered Richard D. (Dick) Chapman, national amateur golf champion, to appear for a physical examination for the same purpose. Chapman, who is in Florida, replied with a request that he be permitted to take the examination down there, and it was believed the board would agree. Chapman's order number is 588. Topping's is 566.

Topping was reached by telephone at his hotel in Cleveland, where he and his wife, Sonja

Beats Hogan, Harrison in Driving Rain

Former Caddy Makes Good His Boast of Never Losing in a Tournament Play-off

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 13.—Leonard Dodson, golf's "oomph" man from the Ozarks, won the triple tie play-off for $1,200 top money in the Oakland Open $5,000 tournament today—and made good his boast he had never been beaten in a battle after the regular competition.

The one-time Springfield, Mo., caddy, now professional at Kansas City, carded a one-over par 71 on the rain-soaked Sequoyah Course to outscore Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, of Little Rock, Ark. Hogan posted a 74 and Harrison a 76.

Tied at 276 for the regular 72-hole competition which ended yesterday, the three started out in drenching rain and a wind that whipped umbrellas inside out. Some 200 spectators followed the players in weather that drove waterfowl to cover.

Greens Flooded

Greens were flooded and the fairways were soft as mush. The spectators finally gave up and rushed for shelter.

Despite such adverse conditions, Dodson trudged through the rain to turn in a round that won acclaim from all. He played first 12 holes in exactly par, eventually going a stroke over on the thirteenth and fourteenth, but finishing with a sensational birdie four on the eighteenth when even a par or bogey would have won for him.

He was out in 35 and home in 36, compared to the 35, 35—70 requirements called standard golf for the course.

Hogan, leading money winner of 1940 and the favorite as the three teed off, carded a one-under-par 34 for a stroke lead over Dodson on the first nine, then fell to pieces on the incoming stretch to take a 40.

Putting Touch Washed Away

The rain ran down Lanky Harrison's neck until he looked like something from another world. It washed his putting touch completely away. He missed a couple at 2 feet and another at 3 feet. His score for the day was 37, 39.

Hogan pocketed $750 and a dunking such as he never got before. Harrison hauled down $550 for flirting with pneumonia.

It was the fourth time that Dodson won an important playoff. In 1936 he defeated Harry Cooper in a post-tournament scramble to take the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Open. The next year he captured the Hollywood (Fla.) Open by outscoring Horton Smith and in the same season he disposed of Bruce Coultart in similar fashion in the Philadelphia Open.

After the three-way tie yesterday, Dodson assured sports writers that winning play-offs was "meat on the table" for him.

"I just know I can't lose." He proved it today in the worst rainstorm ever to hit a major tournament in this city.

Dodson	73, 67, 66, 70—276
Hogan	74, 68, 62, 72—276
Harrison	68, 66, 69, 73—276

Spangler Salaams at McDowell's Feet in Seventh

Greek Boxer Outpunches Bettina

Christoforidis Gains Title in Slugfest; Decision Unanimous

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Jan. 13.—Anton Christoforidis, the spirited battler from Greece, won the world light-heavyweight championship tonight by pounding out a 15-round decision over Melio Bettina, of Beacon, N. Y., former titlist.

The handsome Greek, scaling 169½, gave away an advantage of 5½ pounds.

The battle, ruled a title match by the N. B. A., drew 8,499 fans who paid $20,462.

The rugged Bettina, who held the title six months before losing it to Billy Conn, had an edge in the final four rounds as the two slugged it out toe to toe.

Decision Unanimous

The Associated Press score sheet gave Christoforidis six rounds, Bettina four and five even. The decision was unanimous, both judges and Referee Joe Sedley voting for the European champion.

Jimmy Reeves, 172, of Cleveland, won over Willie Pavlovich, 173, of Brooklyn, on a technical knockout in the semifinal.

Reeves led all the way in taking his early victory. Referee Lou Parker stopped the bout at the end of the third round with Pavlovich's left eye almost closed.

Maxim Wins Pro Debut

Joey Maxim, 169, of Cleveland, 1940 national amateur middleweight champion, made his professional debut by pounding out a four-round decision over Bobby Berry, 166 of Cleveland.

Beauford Glover, of Mansfield, Ohio, stopped Juan Tomaz, of Medina, Ohio, on a technical knockout, in the second round of their scheduled four. Glover weighed 142 and Tomaz 145.

In the four-round curtain raiser, Joey Speer, 166, of Cleveland, outpointed Don Blatchford, 158, of Lorain, Ohio.

Salica Keeps Bantam Title By Game Rally

Outpoints Tom Forte As One-Eyed Boxer In Last 10 Rounds

By the United Press

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—Lou Salica, a beetle-browed battler from Brooklyn, retained the bantamweight championship of the world on courage alone at the arena tonight when he fought ten rounds with one eye closed to win a 15-round decision over Tiny Tommy Forte, of Philadelphia.

Forte, a superb little fighting machine from south Philadelphia, had the fight won in the middle stages when he closed Salica's left eye, but he didn't know what to do then. A capacity crowd of more than 9,000 saw the bout.

The little Philadelphian's crisp right shots made Salica a one-eyed battler at the end of the fifth round and from there to the final bell Salica showed the courage of a true champion to win on points. He took everything Forte offered, and came back for more and still had enough left to hand out the best blows of the evening in the last two rounds.

Forte 1-to-2 Underdog

Forte, who had an even pull at the weights at 117½ pounds, entered the ring a 1-to-2 underdog in Philadelphia's first world championship battle since the Tunney-Dempsey fight in Municipal Stadium's rain-swept ring 15 years ago. Only inexperience kept him from finishing a job that was started well in the first five heats.

Tiny Tim was unmarked at the bell while Salica's eye was beautifully indigo and his body was a mass of red welts. The crowd gave one brief roar of surprise when Salica was announced as "still champion," and then subsided.

Michigan State Tops Temple, 23-22

East Lansing, Mich., Jan. 13 (AP).—A free throw by Center Max Hindman after regulation playing time gave Michigan State a 23-to-22 victory over Temple University here tonight.

Hindman was fouled by Bill Morganstine, Owl forward, as he attempted an under-the-net shot. Referee Eddie Powers blew his whistle as the gun, ending the game, sounded and an argument ensued between Powers and Temple players and coaches over whether the game had ended before the foul was committed.

After a five-minute delay Hindman sank the shot which gave the Spartans their fifth consecutive victory and their second of the season over the Owls.

G. U. Faces Big Test In N. Y. U. Thursday

Hoyas Play Violets at Riverside Stadium In Game That May Make or Break Hopes for National Basketball Honors

Georgetown's biggest obstacle in its drive for Eastern and possibly national championship basketball honors will be the powerful New York University five which invades Riverside Stadium Thursday night.

The Violets bring in a great two-year court record here, 26 victories in their last 28 games. Last year Coach Howard Cann's men rolled over 18 straight opponents before losing to C. C. N. Y. in the season's finale in the Garden. This year the Violets started with eight victories in a row before meeting up with Penn State's baffling zone defense last Friday night on the University Heights court.

The Penn State defeat in the home gym, incidentally, was only N. Y. U.'s fourth loss at home in 68 starts since the 1932-33 season.

Georgetown Coach Elmer Ripley doesn't need the N. Y. U. record book for a line on the strength of the Violets, however, for he has seen them play three times this season when he was in New York for the holidays.

The Hoyas were the eighteenth victim of the Violets last year when they dropped a 50-27 decision in the Garden after staying within striking distance for the first half.

N. Y. U. Holds Edge

Four of the same five players will be back when N. Y. U. invades here Thursday night. Only Capt. Bobby Lewis is missing, and his place has been capably filled by Morton Lazar, the only member of the starting team under 6 feet.

New York U. holds a wide series edge over Georgetown in a court rivalry dating back to 1909. The Violets have won 23 out of 31 contests, but two of the Georgetown victories will never be forgotten by the Violet court historians.

The most memorable one was the 1934-35 season when the Violets met Georgetown in Tech gym and Coach Freddie Mesmer's team upset the

Clark Leads Owls' Hot Streak in Second Half; G.W. Frosh Win

For one half the Yellow Jackets of Randolph-Macon furnished Wilson Teacher's College five a stiff battle last night, but then they expired before the torrid scoring streak of Charley Clark & Co. to drop a 45-26 decision at College Park.

Less than 100 spectators were on hand for the feature game of the evening. Considerably more turned out for the preliminary, which brought together the undefeated freshman squads of George Washington and Maryland. The Little Colonials extended their streak to seven straight with a 35-26 victory, ending Maryland's string at four games.

Despite the fact only three points separated Wilson and the Jackets at half time, Wilson holding a 23-20 edge, the game had already become dull. And when intermission was over, the most interesting aspect of hostilities was still Clark's rapid-fire point making.

To his 10 points in the first period, Clark, a spindley but lightning-fast guard, added 8 more as the second stanza got under way. Randolph-Macon, meanwhile, went scoreless for 11 minutes as the Owls boosted their advantage to 37-20. A few moments later it was 41-22, which eventually proved the margin by which Wilson won. Clark missed the last 5 minutes of play on personal fouls.

Neither club appeared "on" its defensive game, and consequently an unusually large number of fouls was called. Wilson managed to sink 9 of its shots, and R.-M. was less effective by one point.

It was the second victory of the season for the Owls over their Ashland foes, the first a 38-33 triumph on the Virginia court. The victory gave Wilson a 4-3 record in games won and lost.

Eight points by Ernie Cole, elongated pivot man, stole second high honor for the winners. Randolph-Macon's best scorer was big Moulton Phelps, part of a brother combine, who accounted for ten points.

Bill McDowell Wins Decision Over Spangler

Rough Battle Not Decided Until Final Round; Crowd Small

By Al Hailey

Wild Bill McDowell almost knocked out Joey Spangler and vice versa last night at Turner's Arena in an eight-round battle that was total war all the way, but when it was all over they declared Wild Willie the winner by an unanimous decision.

It was a battle that wasn't decided definitely until the final round—it was that close. But McDowell's whirlwind finish which almost finished Spangler was what turned the tide.

A disappointing crowd of some 800 cash customers turned out to see the business and toss $988 into the till of Promoter Joe Turner. The fight headlined Turner's second weekly "all-star" show of eight-rounders—a show which last night produced a big upset in the defeat of Billy Banks by Victor Corchado and a brutal display of left-hand artistry by Gene Buffalo, who defeated Manual Villa.

Spangler Clowns

Spangler, the busy battler who never ceases to throw punches, stole a little stuff from Wild Willie in the clowning department. Noted for raising his hand threateningly after each round, Wild Willie ran into the disconcerting spectacle of a boy who considered this a challenge to continue the fighting after the bell. Referee Charley Reynolds had to step between the two at the end of the fifth.

Biggest laugh of the night came, however, when Referee Ray Bowen was flattened by an errant punch swung by Roy Dunn in a four-round preliminary.

McDowell and Spangler were meeting in a return bout to settle the argument that was born a week ago when the judges called their fight at the arena a draw.

The decision for McDowell was unanimous, although on The Post score sheet he had only a one-round edge going into the final round.

Joey Aggressor

Wild Willie stabbed Joey with a straight left as they met in the middle of the ring in the second, twisted around and drove Joey into the ropes, but Joey came out nicely and

P. G. A. Reviews Successful Year

$50,000 Red Cross Drive Highlights One of Best Seasons

(This is another in a series written for the Associated Press by the Nation's sports leaders.)

By Tom Walsh

President, Professional Golfers Association

Chicago, Jan. 13.—The Professional Golfers Association of America enjoyed one of the finest years in its history in 1940, a year marked by an increase in association membership, successful accomplishment of its Red Cross war relief aims and another fine competive program.

Forty-four new members were added, with 18 of our 29 sections showing gains in members over 1939.

Especially gratifying to every member of our association was the success of its drive for Red Cross funds. More than $50,000 was raised for war relief through the year, with members from every section of the country assisting splendidly in the program.

The highlight event of this movement was the Ryder Cup team match with the challenge team headed by Gene Sarazen. This event, arranged by Ed Dudley, chairman of the tournament committee, and Fred Corcoran, manager of our tournament bureau, was a high spot of the sports year and realized more than $12,000 for the Red Cross.

The tournament program was one of the best ever sponsored by the

TOM WALSH

P. G. A.. Some 26 tournaments were held, with professionals splitting approximately $160,000. Evidence of the success of this program, directed by Mr. Dudley and Mr. Corcoran, is the fact that the tournament bureau has been able to reschedule every tournament on the 1940 list for next year.

The recently completed Miami Open drew the largest crowds in its history, a fact which augus well for 1941. The windup of this tourney, won by Byron Nelson, also winner of the highly successful P. G. A. championship last summer, saw Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., win both the year's money winning title and the Vardon Trophy.

Members of the association are meeting the problem of the draft in the same splendid manner in which they aided in the war relief fund drive. Our professionals report that clubs from all parts of the Nation are guaranteeing retention of their positions to our pros who are drafted for Army service or enlist. The association itself will carry the dues of any member drafted or volunteering for service.

With athletics playing an ever bigger part in our national preparedness program, we of the P. G. A. believe golf is heading for a boom not only in 1941 but for several years to come. The game, with more players than ever, should do its part in bettering the physical condition of both young and old.

Our caddie educational program will be carried on. Numerous benefit matches for P. G. A. war relief will be promoted. And with several excellent tournaments coming up early this year, the Professional Golfers Association is confident of another fine competitive playing schedule.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Of all the changes wrought by a year, none is more amazing than the transition of the New York Yankees from super team to hitless wonders.

The super team myth was exploded by the proceedings of last summer, when the Yankees barely finished in the first division after four years as pennant winners. They had gone South in the spring as a heavy favorite to win a fifth straight pennant.

And why are they now the hitless wonders? Well, the Yanks were the worst hitting club in the American League last year, with a mere .259 team batting average. But that fact notwithstanding, they are still the favorites to win the 1941 pennant in the book of Jack Doyle, who sets the baseball odds. Last week Doyle rated the Yankees his pennant choice, with Cleveland second, Boston third and Detroit fourth.

Surely Doyle isn't picking the Yankees on their batting punch. In the face of the batting averages the Yankees' favoritism represents a complete change of fabric in the make-up of the Yankee club. Yankee teams used to overpower the opposition with slug. Lou Gehrig's bungling at first base and Babe Ruth's pathetic fielding in his later days with the club never made much difference to the Yanks' success. They could slam their way to pennants.

But if the Yankees win the 1941 pennant, and indications are that they will, they'll win it on their pitching and defense. Joe DiMaggio is the only man with the club who could have won a place in the Yankees' old Murderers' Row. He was only one of the three Yanks who hit as much as .300 last season. They were no super team in 1940; they were merely supposed to be.

It's obvious that Doyle, in rating the Yanks as the best club in the league, is anticipating help for the Yankees from their young talent. The Yanks of 1940 will have the services for the entire year of young Ernie Bonham, the pitcher who came up from Kansas City in late July and won 12 games before the season was over. The stocky, freckle-faced Bonham rated with Washington's Sid Hudson as the rookie pitching sensation of the season.

Doyle looks for added punch to come to the Yankees also from the secondbase-shortstop pair of Jerry Priddy and Phil Rizzuto, up from Kansas City. The shortsop job is wide open for Rizzuto, who hit .351 last season, what with Frankie Crosetti a horrible liability at bat for the Yanks last year. Priddy will find it tougher to break into the Yankee line-up with Joe Gordon available for second base, but there were long periods last year when Gordon impressed nobody as a big league hitter despite his long-distance blows.

If the Yankees regain any semblance of their former punch it is apt to be supplied by Charley Keller, who lost 50 points in his average after a spectacular .350 season in 1939. Keller was in a season-long slump last year, but he was underweight and occupied with home affairs that are now happily ended. Belief is that Keller will stage a batting comeback, but the Yankee bosses are not so certain the same can be said for Bill Dickey, whose potent bat used to be such a factor in Yankee pennants. Dickey last year performed like a tired old man.

Stripped of their super club identity, it is a tribute to the Yankees' pitching and defensive play that they rate as pennant favorites. It is also a kick in the pants to what is supposed to be the opposition in the league if the Yanks, as the weakest hitting club in it, can go South as the favorites.

Doyle's odds are a reiteration that (1) the Cleveland Indians, with a fine pitching staff and infield, can't hit; (2) that the Boston Red Sox, with the best hitting club in the league, have no pitching, and (3) that the Detroit Tigers' pennant-winning team of 1940 is coming apart at the seams.

The only move the Indians have made to bolster what was probably the worst hitting outfield in the league last year was the trade that brought them Gerald Walker. Walker's addition to the team won't send fans scurrying to their favorite bookmaker to get a bet down on the Indians. He didn't hit .300 last year, and Cleveland had only one outfielder who did.

Against the Indians' pitching, as personified by Bob Feller, Al Milnar, Mel Harder and Al Smith, there is no complaint, and the Indians have what may be the best infield in the league, but pennants rarely develop without at least one outfielder who can murder the ball.

The Red Sox need something of a pitching miracle to figure in the pennant race. The club's punch, as presented by Jimmy Foxx, Joe Cronin, Ted Williams, Lou Finney, Bobby Doerr and Dominic DiMaggio is a wasting for lack of pitchers who can protect big leads. Boston will go South with the best hiting and the worst pitching in the league.

We can't remember when a pennant-winning club was rated no better than fourth choice in the succeeding season, but that's what is happening to the Tigers, in Doyle's book. But it's understandable. In Charley Gehringer and Dick Bartell, the Tigers have a second baseman and shortstop who last season covered little more than the ground they were standing on, and will be a year older. And the Tigers, forbidden to make any trades as champions, must worry along with them for another season, with the burden seemingly too much.

Colonial Five Whips South Carolina, 46-31

By the Associated Press

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 13.—The George Washington University Colonials defeated the University of South Carolina Gamecocks here tonight in an intersectional basketball game, 46 to 31.

The game was one of the hardest fought court contests witnessed here in recent years, although the Washington cagers maintained a decided edge with their fast-breaking tactics.

The Carolina team held the visitors to a slight margin through three quarters of the game, but were unable to check the drive put on by the Washington quintet in the closing minutes.

Leads Scorers

The individual honors for the game went to Preston Westmoreland, of the losers, with six field goals and three free shots out of four chances, for a 15-point total.

Close behind the star Gamecock forward were Lou Veltri, George Washington guard, with 12 points, and Eddie Amendola, Colonial forward who went out of the game on fouls midway of the second half, with 10 points.

The Washington cagers used a fast-breaking charge which the slower Carolina floor play was unable to match. Time and again the visitors, with Veltri and Amendona breaking fast, scored short shots from under the basket before the Gamecocks could set a defense.

2,600 See Game

The speed of the game, which kept 2,600 fans in an uproar, was marred only in the closing five minutes when Washington effectively froze the ball. The scoring alternated between the two teams evenly for the first 15 minutes, until the Colonials drew ahead on quick goals by Bob Gilham, guard, Celtri and Amendola, while Westmoreland was out of the game.

The Colonials held a six-point lead at halftime, when the score stood at 20 to 14. A quick surge by the visitors at the opening of the second period gave them a nine-point lead.

The Gamecocks came back with three quick field goals and a free shot to draw to within four points of the Colonials, but were unable to hold the pace and slowly fell behind.

War May Force Schmeling to Abdicate European Title

European Champion Is in Army

Parachute Training Prevents Conqueror Of Joe Louis From Defending Crown

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Jan. 13.—Intensive training in Germany's parachute corps has prevented Max Schmeling, former world heavyweight boxing champion, from defending his title as European champion against the Viennese Heinz Lazek.

Military authorities disclosed today that Schmeling had been denied an army furlough to accept the challenge of the Viennese, whose recent victory over Precio Merlo, of Italy, made it obligatory under International Boxing Union rules for Schmeling to defend his title before January 15.

The army explained that Schmeling, who volunteered in the parachute corps in July, 1939, had reached a stage in his training that demanded "extreme exertion and the most intense concentration."

Anny Ondra, Schmeling's actress wife, commented:

"Max will fight soon—but not in the boxing ring."

The status of Schmeling's title after the January 15 deadline has not yet been settled. German sports authorities are debating whether the match should merely be considered postponed by war or whether the "Black Uhlan" must automatically forfeit his title.

"Of course Max has the best excuse in the world," one sports commentator observed, "and it would seem he deserves whatever liberality of interpretation may be possible."

Schmeling held the world title belt from 1930, when he won on a fourth-round foul from Jack Sharkey, until he lost it to Sharkey again in 1932.

Schmeling's last American ring appearance was in 1938, when Joe Louis knocked him out in the first round. Two years before, Schmeling had knocked out Louis in 12 rounds.

C.U. Five Seeks First Victory Here Tonight

St. Francis College To Give Cards Chance To End 2-Game Slump

After two unsuccesful trips on the road, Catholic University's basket ball quintet returns to its home floor tonight to meet the Red Flashes of St. Francis College, of Loretto, Pa., the first of two games scheduled for the C. U. gymnasium this week.

Beaten by Navy on its first trip away, and then dropping a close 31-29 contest to Mount St. Mary's last Friday night at Emmitsburg, Md., the Cardinals will attempt to snap their losing streak and break into the winning column with their first victory of the season.

The Flashes will be no setup, however, for Coach Fod Cotton's Redbirds. The invading Pennsylvania quintet will be highly favored and it will take inspired playing on the part of the C. U. five to come through with an upset victory in this contest. St. Francis' quint opened its season by losing a close game to strong Villanova but came back strong in its two following contests to trounce Morris Harvey and Frostburg.

St. Francis has defeated Catholic University in their previous two meetings. In the first contest back in 1939 the Red Flashes clipped the Cardinals' wings by a 41-33 score and last year scored over the C. U. five by a 34-31 score.

Friday night the Cardinals will return to the Mason-Dixon conference for their second league game by meeting Western Maryland in the Brookland gym. The Mount St. Mary's clash was the opening league battle for the C. U. five.

A freshman clash between Catholic University and Maryland University will be staged at 7:30 tonight as a preliminary event.

Ferrier of Australia Leads Miami Biltmore Amateur Golf

Cards a 71 to Equal Par for Qualifying Round; Chapman Ties for Runner-up

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 13.—Big Jim Ferrier, of Australia, showed the way by two strokes today in the qualifying round of the annual Miami Biltmore Amateur Golf Tournament.

Tied for runner-up honors were Dick Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn., the national champion, and Earl Christiansen, the belting Miami policeman.

Fourth and fifth places went to George Daweon, of Chicago, with a 74, and Sanford Rissman, of Miami Beach, who carded a 75. William Reed, of Indianapolis, snared a 77 for sixth place and last year's winner, Gus Novotny, of Chicago, shared seventh with three others.

Long Baskets Help Oklahoma Beat Nebraska

By the Associated Press

Lincoln, Nebr., Jan. 13.—A. D. Roberts, a stoop shouldered guard known as "Ugh" to his teammates, long-shot Oklahoma to a 40-29 basketball victory over Nebraska here tonight, dumping the Huskers from first place in the Big Six race.

After sinking three long shots and a short bucket in the first half when Nebraska trailed 20 to 21, Roberts was sent back in after a home team rally had put the Huskers in front, 25 to 21 with three minutes of the second period gone, and it took him less than a minute drop in another long shot and start Oklahoma off to victory.

Garnett Corbin followed with two long buckets from the sidelines, then Roberts dropped in another long one and a free throw to put Oklahoma out in front 30 to 25 with the period half gone. Roberts went out after Fitz had scored a field goal and a free throw for Nebraska, but the Sooners were out in front to stay.

Roberts led the scorers with 14 points, Corbin trailing with eight.

Jack Guillot Has 149-397 In Navy Loop

Jack Simmons Rolls 407 in Merchant's League Competition

The Navy boys at Arcadia discovered that Jack Guillot was the big admiral of the fleet, for his 149 high game and 397 set topped them all and helped his Operations quintet to team high counts of 604 and 1,770. Adj. & Imps. took the measure of the Bureau of Ships in all three battles with the help of Cappiello's 351 set and sailed into the top port while the Signal Corps bested the Paymasters in the odd tilt and took over second position with the aid of Walter Burton's 148—361.

Frank Fish, Treasury, and Lee Brown, G. P. O., were the leaders in the Men's Federal meet at Arcadia, the former with his 155 high game and the latter with a 399 top set. G. P. O. was best team for the big game, while HOLC rolled a top string total of 1,827.

Silver Spring

The Georgia Avenue meet at Silver Spring was featured by the four strikes and three spares that Johnny Reid, Carter-Lanhardt, rolled in one game for a record high for the season of 170, which he followed with a 414 set, his 170 game upping the former high by eight sticks. Johnny missed, in the three remaining boxes, a single, a double and a three-pinner which, if he had made, would have given him a near-200 game. In spite of Reid's highs, however, his team lost one game to their opponents. Sherer's Men's Shop took the team highs with 635-1,736. National Electric Machine, Hot Shoppe and Sanford's are the top three teams.

ICE PALACE

Pauline Ford and her Doves team were the standouts in the Ice Palace ladies' meet, Mrs. Ford getting highs of 135-345 that made it possible for the team to set a new record for games with 531 and go on to take the set with 1,509, the latter mark second high for the season. Mrs. Mae Diehl upped the flat game record by one pin, rolling 94. Both Wasps and Doves won all three from the Cyclones and Racqueters, respectively, while the leading Eagles were stung twice by the next-to-last-place Yellow Jackets.

BROOKLAND

The Golden Rule boys of the Odd Fellows loop rolling at Brookland discovered that Harold Hodges' highs of 148-400 had sparked them to team high counts of 639-1,797. The Golden Ruler lads also took all three contests from Mount Pleasant and are five games in front with 36 wins against but 9 losses.

In the Merchants' meet at Convention Hall Jack Simmons, Washington Gas Light, was the leader with his 143 game and big 407 set, taking his boys to team highs of 620 and 1,787.

ICE PALACE

J. Biggs, St. John's, and Corl, St. Andrews, were the big scorers in the Friendship Church meet at the Ice Palace, the former rolling 156 for the top game while the latter has a 392 set. Biggs' high game touched off the spark with his boys and they set two new records, their 682 game upping the previous record by 16 pins while a 1,817 set increased the previous mark by 42 sticks.

Manor Elects William Jones New President

William L. Jones, many-times chairman of the entertainment committee, last night was elected president of the Manor Country Club, succeeding John R. Daly who then was named to Jones' old post.

Other newly elected executive officers were Ralph Pittman, vice president; E. B. Wilson, jr., secretary, and George W. Quirk, treasurer.

Chairmen of three of the club's four major committees were retained, Jones being the one exception. Harry G. Pitt continued as chairman of the golf committee, Ralph Gibson as chairman of the greens committee, and Harry Whitelock as chairman of the house committee.

Nine were named to the board of governors. They were Albert M. Bouic, Walter L. Funderburk, George W. Quirk, H. L. Sincoe, Ira L. Ewers, William L. Jones, E. L. Norris and Ralph D. Pittman.

French Mat Star Given Return Bout Thursday Night

Washington wrestling fans who saw Joe DeValteau, French refugee wrestler, display his wizardry on the mat on Turner's Arena last week will have an opportunity to see him in action again Thursday night. DeValteau, who showed some of the fanciest leg locks seen here in many a moon, has been matched against Tiger Tasker, of Alaska, who has discarded his massive beard.

Headliners on the show are Ernie Dusek, the durable Nebraskan, and Milo Steinborn, the strong man.

DeValteau, who claims he escaped Paris just about the time Hitler invaded that country, made a big hit last week, when he held Paul Boesch to a draw. Previously only one man had beaten Boesch, and he was Jeems Londos.

The semiwindup brings back the Green Hornet, mysterious masked wrestler, against Tommy Rae, of Boston, while in another match Warren Bockwinkle, St. Louis ace, will return after a month absence to engage Jim Austeri, Italian veteran.

Kansas Wins 21st Straight Home Game

Yawrence, Kans., Jan. 13 (AP).—Led by Howard Engleman and Bobby Allen, Kansas turned on the power late to defeat Iowa State, 44 to 41, in Big Six basketball tonight and keep its home-game record clean with 23 straight wins.

Unbeaten in eight nonleague starts, the Cyclones saw their halftime lead of 24-22 fade and bowed to the scrambling Jayhawks in the closing minutes.

Sale of Yankee Club Becomes Daffy Business

Everybody, Including Shirley Temple, Is A Prospective Buyer

By George Kirksey
United Press Staff Correspondent.

New York, Jan. 13.—Baseball potpourri: One of baseball's newest feuds is cooking up between Bob Feller and Birdie Tebbetts . . . Tebbetts remarked recently he doesn't remember ever having been fanned by Bullet Bob . . . said Feller out in Iowa: "I guess I've never fanned Birdie, or at least I don't remember it. But take a look at the records. He doesn't bother me any more than any of the Tigers. And maybe it'll be different this year" . . . The records show that in two seasons Tebbetts has made only five hits off Feller, all of them in 1940, with three coming toward the end of the season.

The almost daily "sale of the Yankees" scoop is becoming a big joke among Yankee fans . . . But it's no joke to Byron Clark, jr., executor of the Ruppert estate . . . Pests are continually bothering him about buying the club, a $4,000,000 proposition . . . One fellow came in Clark's office and discussed the deal and remarked he'd have the team sold in two days . . . Clark casually inquired who the prospective purchasers were and the fellow said, "Spencer Tracy and Jimmy Cagney." . . . Another broker talked over the proposition with Shirley Temple in mind as a prospective buyer . . . The only thing that keeps

CHARLIE GEHRINGER

The Cubs' roster has a striking picture of smiling Jimmy Wilson on the cover . . . Rabbit Warstler's name was left off the Cubs' roster, but he still belongs to them . . . They are still trying to peddle him

Joe Cambria Gets His 'Cuban' but He Turns Out to Be Irishman

. . . Although Charlie Gehringer signed a contract and announced he'll play next season, there is still some doubt about it . . . If he has any more trouble with his back he is likely to hang up his glove for good.

Joe Cleary, Washington rookie pitcher, was born in Cork, Ireland, and was picked up off a Cuban team in Danbury, Conn., by Joe Cambria, who thought he was a Cuban . . . Joe Cronin, Red Sox manager, will go to Hot Springs, Ark., next month to boil out and get in shape before reporting to Sarasota . . . Joe Medwick and Leo Durocher have rented cottages from Paul Derringer and will live at his Sarasota Beach resort until time to report for training at Havana in mid-February . . . The American League acquired the most valuable players in each of the three Class AA leagues . . . The Red Sox bought Pitcher Mike Ryba from Rochester, Washington drafted First Baseman George Archie from Seattle and the Yanks recalled Shortstop Phil Rizzuto from Kansas City.

What happens to Johnny Rucker will be one of the most interesting items of the 1941 season . . . Hailed as "a second Ty Cobb," Rucker was a dismal flop last season, but toward the close of the year showed some signs of regaining his lost confidence . . . Rogers Hornsby is still trying to get a major league coaching job, but is likely to be forced to go back to Oklahoma City next season . . . Some of baseball's wise boys are betting that Frankie Crosetti will be back at shortstop for the Yanks by midseason . . . They think that Rizzuto's size will be out of place in huge Yankee Stadium.

Umpiring is likely to improve in the National League next season, with Bill Klem sitting in the stands keeping check on the boys in blue

A Modern (250 Lb.) Marco Polo: Walter Haight Goes South

Dear Boss,

I always was the longshot kid. In front of me there's a Chamber of Commerce handout that says Miami averages only six days a year when the sun fails to shine. Well, my first day here definitely is one of the six. If it isn't raining, the spray from the ocean certainly is dashing back a long way. In fact, as I write you, the stuff is coming down so hard that I can't see the screen on the outside of the window. All the literature around here talks of Sun Seekers and it sort of makes me feel like a house detective. If it don't stop raining soon I'm going to get you to bottle a couple of rays and send them down air mail, special delivery. I have heard tell that there's something soothing and restful about rain. That may be true, but a guy don't have to travel 1,100 miles to be nothing but a Sadie Thompson on the isle of Pago Pago.

The literature say: that Miami puts the sun and the ocean to work. Well, I always had a certain amount of ingenuity, boss, so today I put the rain to work. I went out to the Hialeah track to see the swans, ducks, flamingos and horses swim. As if I didn't have enough to worry me, I got all mixed up with a sticker. In fact, this is quite a sticker town. If you have the right "in" you can get a sticker for your car that will let you into the polo games, one that will allow you to park in front of the city hall and a raft of others. In fact, if you so desire, you can put so many on your windshield that you have to drive by following the beam and, as I said before there isn't a sunbeam to follow.

The sticker I was talking about is one that will allow me to park in the press row at the track. It is an ordinary little thing that looked like you could just give it a licking and forget it. I was about to do that when I discovered that the envelope contained instructions. They read: "Apply on inside of car only. Better results obtained if not applied on frosted glass. Glass must be clean. Immerse sticker in water for five seconds and apply immediately on clean glass. Do not moisten sticker with sponge or rag—or wet clean glass. Use plenty of water and apply dry sticker."

"Listen, boss, maybe a coconut dropped on my head when I was a baby, but I read that thing over and over and for the life of me I couldn't find out how I could immerse that sticker in water for five seconds and apply a dry sticker. I went over those instructions ten times and even went so far as to get a glass of water and carry it out to the car. Every time I was about to duck the sticker in the glass, I began thinking about that "apply dry sticker."

It's funny how a little thing like a sticker can prey on a guy's mind, but it did. That piece of paper with gum on one side kept getting to be a bigger and bigger problem. On the way back from the track, I kept thinking about it. It got so bad that I began to think "immerse" might mean something different down here. With the rain coming down in sheets, I parked on the side of the road to thrash that sticker thing out. Boss, I was getting so looney by this time that I was ready to immerse the car in Biscayne Bay and then apply the dry sticker.

I thought about buying a couple of drinks and seeing if I couldn't solve the problem but then, I never heard of a sticker around here that would get you out from behind the bars. It finally got so bad that I halfway decided to throw away the sticker and apply the instructions. But I got that sticker on the windshield, Boss. I tore up those damn instructions and I took that damn sticker and I dunked it, not in clean water, but right in a stream that was coming down along the curb and I was so mad I didn't even time it five seconds, either. I flopped it up against that windshield and I said, "Now you little bum you can stick or not stick and I don't car where I park at the track, anyway." And furthermore, Boss, I don't care if that Chamber of Commerce, with its sunny disposition, puts a bulletin out on that. Before closing, Boss, I ran into the height of something or another last night. I mean Jake in a Murphy bed.

War Bugle Captures Indian Creek Purse at Hialeah Park

Agricole Is Beaten Half Length

$5.20 Shot Rewards Badly Beaten Talent With Driving Finish; Remote Control Third

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 13.—War Bugle, a bay son of Man o' War owned by the Circle M Ranch of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Moore (Sheridan, Wyo.), brought joy to most of the fans here today when he rallied in time to win the Indian Creek Pure by a half length. The $5.20 for $2 choice outfinished Shady Brook Farm's Agricole by a half length, running the 7 furlongs in 1:24 2-5 under "Red" Howell.

Remote Control, from Warren Wright's Calumet Farm, finished third in a small field of 3-year-old colts and geldings, four lengths behind. Apprentice Wendell Eads, the Illinois imp who today joined the powerful Calumet forces, was astride Remote Control.

War Bugle, which finished second in his only previous outing of the Florida season, scored a very popular triumph for the rather battered favorite players, who, on Saturday, could put over only one split choice. They had to wait until Domkin scored in today's fourth race to collect again, and followed up that success with a strong play on War Bugle.

Fettacairn began very fast, stealing a daylight lead and holding it until the field neared the stretch turn. Agricole put Fettacairn away, but failed to withstand War Bugle's challenge in the duel to the wire.

Alfred Robertson piloted Spiteful, a 9-to-1 shot owned and trained by his dad, Robert Robertson, to a nose victory in the seventh. The filly was many lengths out of contention most of the trip. She staged a remarkable spurt in the last quarter mile and outfinished Say Judge on the wire. Peanut Lady, the pacemaker, was third, three lengths behind. Dizzy B. bied and was pulled up.

BIG CHANCE, displaying good speed, raced WHA HAE into defeat in the early running. He drew out in the final furlong to have something left at the end. WHA HAE, in close attendance of the pace throughout, faltered through the stretch and outlasted GAY BALKO. The latter, on the inside and hard driven, was unable to overhaul the leaders. GOLD BAND finished well in the stretch drive.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOMKIN, $9.00, $5.30, $3.50; JAYPCEE, $5.10, $3.30; JOHN'S HEIR, $3.20.

DOMKIN, going in nearest pursuit of the leader in the early stages, responded determinedly when it came to a drive and wore SAY JUDGE down. The latter set a fast pace and opened up a big gap rounding the turn, but Harrell outrode Cruickshank through the stretch. JOHN'S HEIR, under light restraint early, disposed of the remainder when straightened into the stretch. TONYPANDY raced evenly.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,400. The Indian Creek. For 3-year-old colts and geldings. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:03. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAR BUGLE, $5.20, $3.40, $2.40; AGRICOLE, $5.90, $3.40; REMOTE CONTROL, $2.50.

WAR BUGLE followed the pace under steadying restraint on the inside until the stretch turn, where he slipped through between the leaders and outstayed AGRICOLE when the real test came. AGRICOLE moved up stoutly on the stretch turn, but wore out and lost ground. This cost him the race. REMOTE CONTROL, under pressure all the way, disposed of FETTACAIRN in the last furlong. The latter stopped as if short.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:31½. Off at 4:32. Winner, F. P. Jump's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLOSE TO, $7.50, $3.80, $2.60; DREAM BOAT, $3.50, $2.50; REX FLAG, $2.80.

CLOSE TO rated off the pace while saving ground, moved up steadily after entering the stretch and drew out. He then faltered and just lasted long enough to withstand DREAM BOAT'S bid. The latter was poorly ridden. She lost ground entering the stretch and came with a belated rush. REX FLAG set a fast pace, but weakened in the final drive. TITILATOR had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:03. Winner, R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPITEFUL, $20.10, $8.90; $4.40; SAY JUDGE, $5.80, $4.20; PEANUT LADY, $4.40.

SPITEFUL, stoutly restrained until well around the lower turn, moved up gamely on the extreme outside of the leaders and wore SAY JUDGE down. The latter saved much ground entering the stretch, assumed a brief lead, but could not stave off the winner's challenge. PEANUT LADY showed speed from the start and outlasted DISSEMBLER in the final drive. The latter hung after making a bold bid entering the stretch. DIZZY B. bled.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:33. Off at 5:34. Winner, Pine Run Farm's b. g. (5), by Canter—Black Momma. Trained by W. Hodson. Value to winner, $950; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACANT, $27.40, $9.80, $7.60; KEY MAN, $6.20, $5.20; DR. BONES, $6.60.

BLACANT, off in the first flight and steadied early, responded willingly when placed to a drive and wore down DR. BONES to take command and was kept to a drive to the end. KEY MAN lacked early speed, came with good energy when asked and closed willingly. DR. BONES was hustled to the front at once, saved ground, but weakened gradually in the closing stages. HAND AND GLOVE was under restraint while in forward contention, but flattened out when placed to a drive entering the stretch.

Dear Al:

Apprentice Jockey Wendell Eads will stay in Florida and not go to California, as has been said in other quarters. Yesterday the Charles Town, Jil., boy signed with the Calumet Farms, which has Whirlaway, a candidate for the Kentucky Derby and other big stakes here on the grounds. Eads, however, is unlikely to be in Whirlaway's saddle when the colt goes to the post at Louisville because Jockey Basil James signed for that job some time ago. However, Eads gets with one of the Nation's biggest outfits and one with a lot of fit and speedy horses. He's a good kid and I like to see him get along. Maj. Goss L. Styker, president of the Laurel track, is visiting here along with Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Hockley. He reports that the Maryland track is O. K. and that the untimely death of James Butler last fall has not changed the setup at that plant. Steve Arata, Associated Press operator, was called for the Army and passed the examiner with flying colors. So the boys got down on Conscript in yesterday's fourth race, but the 4-year-old finished out of the money. Today they are going to back Aerial Bomb. Bob Cook, Earl Jameson and Frank Cronan report that last Sunday's fishing was a washout. Word has been received from Chile that Jockey Ruperto Donoso has been drafted into the Chilean army for a year. That probably explains the fact that he has failed to show up here. Leroy DuBois, former jockey, has departed for Texas to join the Cavalry, and John Swisher, well-known jockey agent, becomes one of Uncle Sam's chosen boys next week via the selective draft. Apprentice Hugh Lemmons loses his "bug" on January 20. Jockey Willie Emery returns to the saddle tomorrow after being on the shelf with a bruised leg. This is getting to be a newsy little column, eh? I wish I could see you all on the rail. BILL.

First race—Remembering was second to Starweista and appears ready for a set of brackets. Comes from a good barn and gets in light. Tripped turned in a third last out and breaks off the rail this time. The position is against him but he's dangerous. Boiled Brisket for the show end.

Second race—Perlette has turned in two good recent races, being third in one test and winning another. Carries top weight but is too fit to keep off the top. Buttermilk begins to figure with this kind and is dangerous. Fore Isus for the minor award.

Third race—Hunting Home, winner of two at Tropical, appears nicely placed in this event. Another heavy-weight carrier but he is so fit that I just can't pass him up. Trimmed has won since coming South and is a threat in this company. Ugin to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Burning Deck was second to Seventh Heaven and there are no Seventh Heaven's in this field. Looks like the spot for a crack down and I plan to string along. Notforme has plenty of speed and a tendency to stop but is dangerous. Spang for the show.

Fifth race—Bule Twink has plenty of foot and may be the right one in a rather open race. Kansas City was a winner in New York and has worked kindly since. Seventh Day steps up but probably will be a serious contender.

Sixth race—Aerail Bomb has two fine races as recommendations in this field. Needs only the right handling. Little Risk has been working well and is a threat. Sassy Lady should get the third money in this brand of company.

Seventh race—Take Wing was heavily backed recently and belongs with these. This could be the right day. Shaun G was third to the speedy Priority and promises to go well. Royal Robes for the show.

Eighth race—Radio stumbled in the bad going last out, and had no chance after that mishap. Appears ready to run a good race and I'm going to be there for a price. Good Reception won last out in mud and may like the turf course. Waugh Pop was disqualified as a winner.

Eads, Apprentice Star, to Ride for Calumet Farm

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 13.—Wendell Eads, the Illinois apprentice sensation of the Florida racing season, today agreed to terms to ride for Warren Wright's Calumet Farm establishment, repeatedly for a two-year period. The deal was closed with Carl Blair, who races horses on Illinois tracks.

Basil James already had been signed to ride Wright's Whirlaway in the Kentucky Derby. Should Whirlaway start in the Flamingo, for which he is being pointed, it is not decided who the rider will be; possibly James. Eads, who topped the Tropical Park riders with 19 winners, is the leading apprentice here to date. He loses his 5 pounds apprentice allowance February 27.

Bill McDowell Wins Decision Over Spangler

Rought Battle Not Decided Until Final Round; Crowd Small

Bill took the lead in the third round and tore after Spangler with a driving left hook to the stomach. But Joey just stepped back and waved his arms high above his head, and then dove forward. The Texan kept him away with a stabbing left hand to the face, but then Spangler lifted Wild Bill off his feet with a smashing left hook under the right jaw.

Wild Willie moved back in with a series of rights and lefts to Joey's jaw, and at the bell he slammed a terrific left hook to Joey's jaw.

Joey declared total war in the fourth round and opened up with all he had to drive Bill back into the ropes. But Wild Willie didn't get excited—he merely stepped back and poked a left into Joey's exposed jaw that caught the Richmonder off balance and sent him down for no count.

Victor Corchado, a dusky little businessman who claims he's the featherweight champion of all Puerto Rico, sprang the night's biggest surprise by chopping out an eight-round decision over Washington's Billy Banks, the Beau Brummel of U Street.

Corchado did it with a long, overhand right and a tireless left hook which he combined with a punishing body attack to give Billy a thorough beating.

As early as the second round he had Billy in trouble with a driving right on Billy's left ear. He outmaneuvered Billy completely at infighting and had Banks hanging over the ropes after a toe-to-toe exchange in the sixth round. Banks could never cope with Victor's hit-and-run tactics with that stunning overhand right, and every time he drove Corchado into the ropes, the Puerto Rican held him off with one forearm and pumped shots home to the body with his other hand.

In one of the bloodiest fights seen at the Arena in recent months, Gene Buffalo, left hook and jab artist from Philadelphia, shot barrage after barrage of lefts to the face and body of Manuel Villa, 150-pound newcomer from Mexico, and was rewarded with the eight-round decision

Eagles' League Lead at Stake in Match With Orioles Tonight

4,500 Fans To See Match At Riverside

Washington Paces Baltimore by Only Two Points; Loss Would Tie Rivals

By Jack Munhall

Tonight for the first time since early in the season the Washington Eagles will find their Eastern Amateur Hockey League lead seriously endangered as Baltimore's second-place Orioles invade Riverside Stadium for a match expected to draw a record crowd.

With the Orioles having cut Washington's lead to a mere 2 points by Sunday night's victory over River Vale, the Eagles must win tonight or relinquish their undisputed leadership for a second-place deadlock with the defending champions.

Because of the importance of the match in the standings and because, too, the Eagles and the Orioles almost never play a dull game, Riverside officials anticipate an attendance of between 4,500 and 5,000 spectators. To accommodate the expected record crowd stadium officials yesterday completed a revision of the stands which will increase the seating capacity by 600.

Battle for Supremacy

This will be the sixth match of the season between Baltimore and Washington and, befitting this encounter, it will probably give one team an edge in their season series.

Five times this season the two rivals have clashed and each now boasts of two victories, one match having resulted in a 5-5 overtime tie. Attesting to the equality of their strength and the spirit they display against each other is the record which shows that all but one of the five matches was decided by a margin of a single goal. The exception was an 8-3 licking Washington dealt Baltimore in their current meeting.

In their first duel, Washington beat Baltimore, 2-1. The Orioles retaliated with a 2-1 victory next time they met, but then suffered that 8-3 humiliation. The 5-5 overtime tie was the next result, and the Orioles won the fifth match, 5-4.

Eagles Given Edge

Latest official league statistics give Washington a decided edge over Baltimore offensively and rate the foes about even defensively. Playing three less games than Baltimore, Washington has out-scored the Orioles, 134 to 118, and has yielded 87 tallies to the opposition for 92 for Baltimore. Since the Eagles have given an average of three goals a match to the opposition, they rank just slightly below the Orioles as a defensive unit.

Embellishing the match itself will be at least a pair of budding individual duels, those between Washington's Johnny McTeer and Baltimore's Bob Dill, and Washington's Paul Courteau and Baltimore's Ned Vitarelli. The respect these pairs have for the others ends with their mutual admiration for hockey playing ability. Dill and McTeer are remembered for their fist fight which touched off a free-for-all here last month, while Courteau and Vitarelli, though they never really have squared off, harass and jostle each other throughout every match.

Two Smoothies Oppose

Two of the smoothest and most underrated players in the league will oppose whenever Jimmy McCurry, Washington rookie defenseman, runs up against Kenny Partis, Baltimore center who played here last season. McCurry, according to Eagles Coach Redvers Mackenzie, is the unsung star of the Washington team.

"Few have given McCurry due credit," says Mackenzie," for the way he has stepped in to fill Bill Davies' defense job so ably that one of the league's best defensemen in yeras hardly has been missed."

Partis, a slender youngster whose stamina belies his frailness, is a clever play-maker and a past master at the art of poke checking, and is guiding hand in Baltimore's high-powered offensive.

Bolster Declines To Work Pro Games

Pittsburgh, Jan. 13 (AP).—Calvin L. (Cal) Bolster, nationally known Pittsburgh sports official, announced today he had turned down an invitation to join the staff of football arbiters who will work National League professional games next autumn and would stick in college ranks.

Coincident with his announcement, Earl Cavanaugh, another prominent local whistle-tooter, cast his lot with the pros, joining William H. (Red) Friesell, jr., and Harry Robb, who signed with the National League last week.

Under an ultimatum of Asa S. Bushnell, commissioner of the Eastern Intercollegiate Association, officials assigned through his organization must choose between pro and college jobs before January 20.

Overlin-Cisco Fight Changed To Tuesday

Menendez Moves Nontitle Middleweight Battle Back One Day

Middleweight Champion Ken Overlin's battle with Tony Cisco, of Norristown, Pa., has been set back a day, Matchmaker Gabe Menendez announced yesterday.

Originally scheduled for Monday night at Turner's Arena, the ten-round nontitle fight has been set back until Tuesday night out of deference to Overlin's stablemate, Georgie Abrams.

Abrams is fighting Jimmy Leto Monday night in Carlin's Arena in Baltimore. Menendez agreed to the change in dates in order to make it possible for Chris Dundee, manager of both boys, to be in his fighters' corners each night.

Cisco, a former Overlin stablemate, has fought here several times, including defeats at the hands of Abrams and Steve Mamakos. He lost a split decision to Mamakos.

Menendez said that he is giving Overlin a $1,500 guarantee or a privilege of 35 per cent of the gate.

Jefferson High Beaten, 26-16, By N.T.S. Five

Overcoming a deficit at intermission, National Training School basketers yesterday defeated Jefferson High, of Falls Cchurch, 26-16, behind the stellar scoring of Center Seipp.

Seipp turned in 17 points for the winners to take credit for one of the highest individual point efforts among schoolboys this season.

After one period N. T. S. had grabbed a 9-3 margin, but it was held scoreless in the second stanza as Jefferson rushed into a 13-9 edge. That was quickly remedied, however, N. T. S. taking charge of things soon after the third quarter whistle and winning almost at will.

Indiana Defeats Wildcats, 52-32

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 13 (AP).—Indiana University's national collegiate champions outlasted Northwestern's Wildcats tonight to win, 52 to 32, their second straight Western Conference basketball game.

Though the Hoosiers got away to an early 6-to-3 lead, Northwestern tied them four times in the first half and the teams were deadlocked, 19-all, at the intermission.

Johnston said the fight would be Simon's last before his title test with Joe Louis in Detroit March 14.

Cawthon Leaves Philadelphia, Mum on Eagles' Coaching Job

Former Texas Tech Mentor Won't Disclose Decision; 'Wants Time to Consider' Terms

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—Pete Cawthon left by train for Lubbock, Tex., today without disclosing whether he would accept an offer to coach the Philadelphia Eagles next fall.

Bert Bell, president of the National Professional Football League team, said he and Coowner Art Rooney had made the former Texas Tech coach a "proposition" but that Cawthon had asked more time to "think it over."

"He has several other offers in view," Bell added. "There were no differences between Cawthon and us, even to length of time on a contract."

Bell declined to disclose terms of the proferred contract.

Cawthon said he planned to stop at St. Louis en route to Texas. He came here Sunday for week-end conferences with Bell and Rooney.

Surface Summoned By Selective Service

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 13 (AP).—A letter from a Selective Service board greeted Hal Surface, of Kansas City, when he came here today to compete in the Florida State tennis championships.

Surface, seeded fifth here and ranked twelfth nationally, was instructed to report tomorrow for a physical examination preparatory to entering the Army for a year's training.

Said Surface: "I'd rather go now than wait. I don't know what branch I'll go in. The Army has got me now so they'll have to put me where they want me."

Devitt Prep Five Defeats Johnnies, 24-20

Winners Take 12-5 Lead in First Half; Cullen Tops Scorers

Its second setback in three days was the lot of St. John's High cagers yesterday, Devitt Prep pinning a 24-20 defeat on them in a struggle at the Johnnie gym. Saturday night the Cadets were routed by Woodrow Wilson.

Only five points the home team was able to tally in the first half and that proved its downfall. Devitt meanwhile had taken a 12-5 lead.

Center Cullen paced the winners with 9 points, and St. John's best effort was turned in by Dick Hathaway. Six foul shots and one field goal gave him a total of 8 points.

Junior varsity players avenged St. John's varsity loss, however, beating Devitt's juniors by 24-6. The latter could score only one field goal.

Tech to Test Roosevelt in Series Today

Central Invades Eastern; Devitt Confronts Gonzaga

Though it holds one lopsided victory in public school competition already, Roosevelt High's path to its second championship in a row is expected to hit one of its roughest stretches today when the "Mighty Midgets" of Tech are entertained at the Upshur Street gym.

The game will provide half the interhigh action for the day, Central moving over to Eastern for a clash which the White Tide figures to win at will. Both affairs start at 3:30.

In contrast to its opener with Central, Roosevelt today will be facing a club with enough idea of defense to hold the Riders' ace, Hymie Perlo, within reasonable scoring limits. Stars of Western, which Tech beat last Friday, managed for only 17 points. Roosevelt will also be meeting a team with the ability to get a lot of score for itself, witness the Manual Trainers' heavy beatings of Hyattsville and Mount Rainier.

Whatever the outcome, however, fans may expect to witness a torrid battle between Perlo and Jackie Walsh, the Trainers' main threat. Perlo was held out of one of Roosevelt's two road games last week-end, but his injured ankle will be able to withstand action today.

Five other games mark today's program, highlighted by the meeting of Anacostia and Calvin Coolidge at the latter's gym at 3:30. Coach Julian Colangelo, who headed the Anacostians last year and the year before, is now mentor of the new Coolidge outfit.

Other afternoon battles bring together Devitt and Gonzaga, Washington-Lee and Mount Rainier, and Rockville and Hyattsville. Each will be at the court of the latter. The only night clash will be at Bethesda-Chevy Chase, where the Barons engage Fairfax at 8 p. m.

Masculine Horse Show Team Accepts Women's Challenge

Maj. Elms, Capt. Wagstaff, Lieut. Hughes And Sam Bogley to Contest Four Ladies

By Anne Hagner

Not that it's a man's world—but four expert horsemen, accepting the challenge of a quartet of feminine riders, will attempt to prove masculine supremacy in the tanbark world at the President's Birthday Horse Show at Fort Myer January 23 and 24.

The foursome, made up of Maj. George Elms, with Clipped Wings; Capt. David Wagstaff, with Enterprise; Samuel E. Bogley, with Ring Master, and Lieut. Fred J. Hughes, jr., with Black Caddy, feels far too chivalrous to challenge the ladies themselves. It is a strictly horse-against-horse battle, they'll have you know.

The original plans for this battle of the sexes were made when Mrs. Charles Lyman, Mrs. Leslie McNair, Lisbeth Stieg, and Ellie Leh sent word around town that they would meet all comers at catch weights over as stiff an open jumping course as the gentlemen wished to erect.

Anything for the Show

Fort Myer officers, always ones to take a dare, mulled over the problem in their spare moments and, with the assistance of Bogley and Ring Master, plan to jump anything in sight if it will promote President Roosevelt's birthday fun.

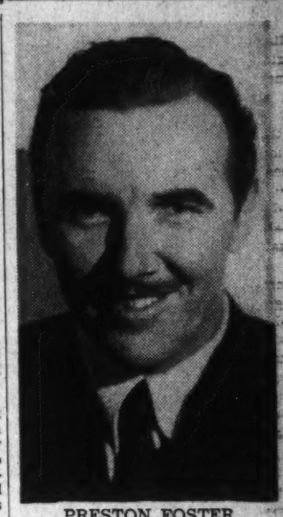
The Army representatives at first hoped to include several civilian members on their team, but so few of them have made definite plans to show in open classes that they decided to catch as catch can—and sought as good a crop of fencers as is catchable around these parts.

On the grounds that 50 per cent of the ladies' team, Mrs. Lyman's Maui Girl and Miss Stieg's Hi-Ho, happen to be Madison Square Garden veterans, the gentlemen have three of the same ilk. Clipped Wings, Black Caddy and Enterprise were all frequently in the ribbons in the November National, and Enterprise distinguished herself there by winning the coveted Bowman Challenge Cup.

Soldiers See Victory

Ring Master, the civilian member, hit the big time last year when he jumped off with Black Caddy at 6 feet 4½ inches, at the Arlington Hall Horse Show. Caddy won that round, but Ring Master, a reformed circus horse, proved his intrinsic worth. So far this season the stock bay gelding has been kept in shape by hunting three days a week without benefit of schooling over big fences, but Bogley romped him over several stiff courses Sunday and found that his mount has not lost the knack.

Rumor hath it, in the environs of Fort Myer's chatting headquarters, that the men's team, speaking modestly, expects a battle from Maui Girl, Hi-Ho, Miss Leh's King Rock and Mrs. McNair's Here's How. The way the officers' mounts have been schooling, however, the grapevine predicts that they will win under wraps. Jack Doyle, New York bet-



PRESTON FOSTER, Hollywood's romantic leading man, who has accepted an invitation to ride in the horse show at Fort Myer January 23-24, opening event of the President's Birthday Ball ting commissioner, refused to be quoted on the odds.

Before the rest of the show becomes lost in team rivalry, Maj. Elms would have the world realize that there are classes for green hunters, fault and out, road hacks, open jumpers, open hunters, take-your-choice jumping, working hunters, jumper scurry, hunt teams and open jumpers. The committee has been hearing impatient noises from exhibitors who have failed to receive prize lists, but insist that approximately three have been mailed all around and that the law of averages favor the arrival of one.

Reserved seats are $1, $1.50 and $2.50. They may be obtained by calling Chestnut 3000, Branch 243.

ZIMMERMAN

An attendance of about 200 is anticipated by John D. Marsh, president of the D. C. unit.

Another Airline Record

American Airlines, Inc., carried 370,930 revenue passengers and flew 311,746,689 revenue passenger miles in 1940, according to figures released by Charles A. Rheinstrom, vice president. This compares with 541,757 revenue passengers carried, and 207,360,215 revenue passenger miles flown in 1939. The 1940 figures represent a new record for travel over an air transport system in a single year, he said.

Record Ditto Order

William E. Durbin, Washington branch manager of Ditto, Inc., yesterday reported receipt of a War Department order for 160 machines to be used in map reproduction. The $96,851 order is the largest in the local branch's history. Mr. Durbin said. The machine will be used at military bases.

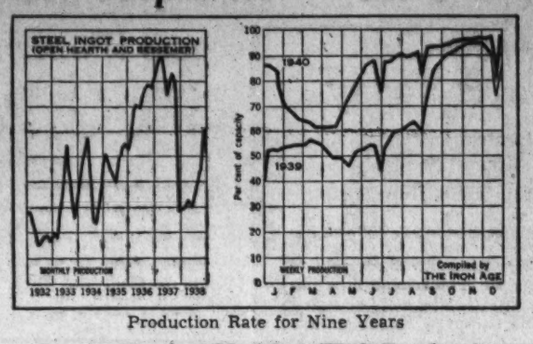
'Unlimited' Demand May Push Steel Output Above 100 Pct.



Production Rate for Nine Years

Current Rate at 98.5 Pct. With Production To Reach Record 1,540,000 Tons This Week; No Slackening Expected

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 13.—Steel ingot production at a rate exceeding 100 per cent of capacity for the industry as a whole was being forecast today in metal circles.

Giving weight to predictions was announcement by the American Iron & Steel Institute that plants this week were operating at an average of 98.5 per cent of capacity. At this rate, a production of around 1,540,000 tons was indicated, the greatest tonnage produced in any week in history.

The rate last week was 97.2 per cent, a month ago 96.8 per cent, and a year ago 85.7 per cent. With operations inching upward, some executives predicted the 100 per cent mark might be topped before spring.

Many circles, viewing both national defense and normal peacetime requirements, for the first time went so far as to call the demand "unlimited," and hinted there might be no slackening in operations, except for necessitous furnace renovating, throughout the year.

At the current rate of production, a steel ingot out-turn in excess of 80,000,000 tons would be rolled up for 1941, a rise of over 20 per cent above the 65,246,000 tons produced in 1940, the peak year for the industry. The 1940 production topped the previous peak year, 1929, by around 7 per cent.

No let-up in metal demand, heavily expanded by national defense orders, is now in sight. Incoming business in exceedng both production and shipments.

A question frequently asked is this: How can a steel plant operate in excess of 100 per cent capacity?

Here's the answer:: When a plant is rated for production capacity, a certain number of days' shutdown each year for relining and repairing of furnaces is allowed for. Actually, a furnace does not have to shut down as frequently as capacity-rating provisions permit. A breakneck rate of production, with relining interruptions held to a minimum, can be maintained for several months. When furnaces pour out steel at a fast clip, with few shutdowns, operations can easily top the 100 per cent capacity level.

Tonnage production is expanding also because many plants long idle and once rated almost in the obsolescent class, have been whipped into shape and are being relighted.

Buffalo Scrap Price Cut

Buffalo, Jan. 13 (AP).—Steel scrap dealers today posted a price of $21-$22 a ton for No. 1 heavy melting steel, first quotation since the market was disturbed by Federal moves to set a ceiling for the market. This compared with the recent high of $23 touched in actual business and a nominal peak of $24.50.

Leon Henderson, commissioner for price stabilization, indicated at Washington a week ago the Government desired a top price for No. 1 heavy melting scrap of $20 a ton at Pittsburgh.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—The wheat market today ran into more selling similar to that which lowered prices about a cent Saturday, but, after a fractional setback, quotations closed slightly higher.

At one time May wheat was off ⅝ cent from Saturday's close to 86⅛, lowest since December 29. Final prices were unchanged to ⅜ higher than Saturday, with May 86⅞@86¾ and July 82¼@82⅝.

Some of the market's weakness was associated with increased receipts at some terminals, particularly in the Southwest. This contributed hedging sales, which were offset by removal of hedges against flour and cash wheat business, by reinstatement of lines sold out Saturday and by short covering.

Corn closed unchanged to ¼ lower; May, 62½@62¼; July, 62⅜@62½; oats, ⅛@⅜ down; soybeans, 1⅛@1⅝ higher; rye, unchanged to ¼ off, and lard, 10@20 higher.

Spot wheat prices here were lowered ¼@½ cent and official inspections were made of 61 cars received, largest in some time.

British trade sources minimized the importance of the German-Soviet grain deal disclosed Friday. Broomhall, British authority, said the report that a Russian mission was to negotiate for exports of Argentine grain suggested this might be trans-shipped to Germany or used to replace Russian grain turned over to Germany. Traders here said it was not clear how any large-scale shipments from Argentina were to be made in view of the shortage of ocean space and the blockade.

O'Brien Named Head of Chicago Board of Trade

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—Philip R. O'Brien today was elected president of the Chicago Board of Trade to succeed John G. McCarthy, who has served two one-year terms.

O'Brien's election was without contest. He will take over the presidency formally next Monday.

A farmer by avocation, O'Brien said he hoped during his term to promote a "better understanding" between producers of farm products or their organizations and the Board of Trade.

O'Brien is 48 years old and a native of Chicago. He has a dairy farm in Door County, Wis., and a hog and cattle farm near Marengo, Ill.

Wilson & Co. Net Rises to $3,624,645

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—Wilson & Co., meat packers, reported today consolidated net earnings, including domestic and foreign subsidiaries for the fiscal year ended October 26, 1940, totaled $3,624,645.

This was equal to 84 cents a share on common stock after annual dividends on $6 preferred stock had been deducted, and compared with a profit of $3,201,639, or 63 cents a share on common stock, in the preceding year.

U. S. Relief Agency Enters Butter Market

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Surplus Marketing Administration entered the local butter market today purchasing 300 tubs of miscellaneous extras at 29¼ cents a pound. This was a decline of ¾ cent from Saturday's price and 6¼ cents off the three-year peak established December 12.

Today's purchases, announced by officials of the Mercantile Exchange, were the first by the S. M. A. since June 14, 1940.

$6,750,000 Issue Of Utility Offered

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—A bank-ink syndicate headed by John Nuveen & Co. today publicly offered a new issue of $6,750,000 in 2½, 2¾ and 3 per cent electric revenue bonds, due 1942 to 1971, of the central Nebraska division of the Consumers Public Power District. The bonds were offered on a yield basis.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Cotton futures about-faced today after swinging to the highest levels for the season last week. The final range was 4 to 9 points lower.

Above 10½ cents a pound for nearby deliveries, Southern holders and spot merchants seemed more willing to hedge cotton. The increased offerings made buyers wary and the list tended downward most of the session.

Distant deliveries, however, staged a short-lived rally on rumors of plans to cut the 1941 crop enough to lop 1,000,000 bales off next year's production.

Most traders felt recent talk of acreage reduction has been largely discounted and pressure persisted.

Worth street textile dealers reported a heavy business in sheetings, where no accurate check on sales exists. Prices rose as much as ¼ cent a yard.

Home Building Cost in Capital Rises Sharply

Increase of $678 In Year Reported For 6-Room House

Cost of building a standard six-room house in Washington has advanced $678, a survey by the Federal Home Loan Bank revealed yesterday.

The approximate cost here was $6,416 in December as compared with $5,738 in the same 1939 month, according to the survey. The "cubic-foot cost" was 26.7 cents in December, 1940, against 23.9 cents in corresponding month last year.

Cost of home building is at the highest point here in at least five years. Taking December as a base, the cost was as follows: 1940, $6,416; 1939, $5,738; 1938, $5,854; 1937, $6,019; 1936, $5,431.

A person who built a house in the three months ended June 30 could have saved at least $781, according to the FHLB. The costs by quarters were as follows for Washington: September, $5,894; June, $5,735; March, $5,741.

The house on which costs are reported is a detached six-room of 24,000 cubic feet volume. Living room, dining room, kitchen and lavatory on first floor; three bedrooms and bath on second floor. Exterior is wide-board siding with brick and stucco as features of design. Best quality materials and workmanship are used throughout. The house is not completed ready for occupancy.

It includes all fundamental structural elements, an attached one-car garage, an unfinished cellar, an unfinished attic, a fireplace, essential heating, plumbing and electric wiring equipment and complete installation.

It does not include wallpaper nor other wall nor ceiling finish on interior plastered surface, lighting fixtures, refrigerators, water heaters, ranges, screens, weather stripping, nor window shades.

Reported costs include, in addition to material and labor costs, compensation insurance, an allowance for contractor's overhead and transportation of materials, plus 10 per cent for builder's profit. Reported costs do not include the cost of lands nor of surveying the land, the cost of planting the lot, nor of providing walks and driveways; they do not include architect's fee, costs of building permit, financing charges, nor sales costs.

In figuring costs, current prices on the same building materials list are obtained every three months from the same dealers, and current wage rates are obtained from the same contractors and operative builders.

Hog Prices Soar To 16-Month Top

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—Hog prices soared 25 to 40 cents per hundredweight today to above $8, highest since September, 1939.

It was the sharpest upturn in some time, carrying the top to $8.10, highest price paid here since the livestock market's rise right after the outbreak of war in Europe.

The market's strength was attributed by livestock men largely to moderate receipts, good consumer demand as reflected by the wholesale meat trade, and forecasts of reduced supplies in 1941.

Fresh pork prices in the wholesale market rose ½ cent a pound, light loins rising to 17 cents, highest since last October.

Gen. Electric Orders Heaviest in History

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Orders received by General Electric Co. in 1940 totaled $554,190,000, largest for any year in the company's history and an 81 per cent increase over $360,748,000 in 1939, Charles E. Wilson, president, announced today.

Orders covering equipment for national defense purposes amounted to about $250,000,000.

In the year's final quarter orders reached a record high for any three-month period of $256,380,000, up 129 per cent from $112,166,000 in the comparable 1939 period.

Oils set the pace for the rise, which dealers said directly reflected improvement in the Mediterranean war situation. Mexican eagle rose to 8 shillings on speculative buying. In the industrial group textile shares attracted support and gains dotted brewery and tobacco issues.

British government bonds showed little variation except for a minor setback in the war loan 3½ per cents.

Indecisive Moves Mark Sluggish Trade; Carriers Bolstered by Earnings Prospect

By Frederick Gardner
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Jan. 13.—Stocks generally loitered at the cross-roads in today's market and the majority never was able to decide which direction to take. Scattered rails, utilities and specialties put up a show of resistance but minor declines were plentiful at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was unchanged at 44.9. Transfers of 474,770 shares compared with 751,670 last Friday and were the smallest for a full session since December 3.

Steels all but ignored an upturn in this week's mill operations to the highest ingot production rate on record. Motors lagged despite feverish output activities and sales in this field. Carriers were bolstered by reports of mounting traffic and earnings prospects buoyed individual stocks in other categories.

The virtually unbroken advance since the first of the year, brokers suggested, caused some customers to stand aside on the idea a technical recession might be in the offing. Others appeared reluctant to extend commitments pending outcome of the expected battle in Congress over the bill broadening the President's powers to aid the democracies. A little better brand of war news helped stocks at London.

The market had to consider the announcement the British had requisitioned more American stocks and bonds from nationals, evidently for the purpose of liquidating them to obtain dollar exchange. Many offerings from this source have been handled through private syndicates off the Stock Exchange. After the close it was learned Wall Street firms had sold by subscription a block of 80,000 shares of Montgomery Ward common at today's final listed price of $39 a share, which was unchanged.

New Haven Railroad common was up 3-32 of a point at 25 cents on several 1,000-share blocks. Improved also were Pennsylvania, American Telephone, Public Service of N. J., U. S. Steel, Kennecott, du Pont, Sperry, Studebaker and Goodyear. Chesapeake & Ohio made a new high for the past year but slipped at the last. New 1940-'41 tops were posted for senior issues of Celotex and American Locomotive.

Under water were Bethlehem Steel, Republic, Inland Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Rubber preferred, Douglas Aircraft, International Harvester, Westinghouse, American Can, Sears Roebuck, Anaconda and Standard Oil of N. J.

Bonds were irregularly higher, with secondary rails again exhibiting quiet strength. Commodities were uneven. Wheat at Chicago was unchanged to up ⅜ of a cent a bushel, and corn was unchanged to off ¼. Cotton was down 20 to 45 cents a bale.

In the Curb gains were retained by American Gas, Electric Bond and Share, Gulf Oil, Humble Oil and Republic Aviation. Losers included Jones & Laughlin, E. W. Bliss, N. J. Zinc and Pennsylvania-Central Airlines. Volume here was aroupd 95,000 shares against 135,000 in the preceding full session.

It was just three years ago tonight that a wacky sort of stage production, a conglomeration of many of the most hilarious gags in vaudeville, made its debut in a New York theater.

It starred two famous vaudevillians named Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson and appropriately it was called "Hellzapoppin." The dramatic critics were anything but kind to it and predicted pontifically that it couldn't last more than a few days.

And so tonight "Hellzapoppin" is celebrating its third anniversary, blithely going along pleasing thousands of people despite the fact that the critics say it shouldn't.

In celebration of the anniversary, Olsen and Johnson are to go on the air tonight on the "We The People" program over WJSV and the Columbia network at 9. Microphones are to be on the "Hellzapoppin" stage to bring you the story of their success right in the midst of the stage production.

Before the switchover to the Broadway theater, other guests on the program are to tell their human interest stories from C. B. S. radio theater. One of them is to be Thornton Burgess, the perennial writer of animal stories for children. Just how perennial Mr. Burgess is can be gleaned from that fact that more than 5,000,000 copies of his books about Peter Rabbit, Farmer Brown, Bowser, the Hound, and other such natural characters have been sold. Burgess started writing them in 1910.

Winter's Worst Storm Damages Two Freighters

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—The worst storm of the winter battered Atlantic shipping today, leaving two American freighters in distress and delaying scheduled arrivals of five passenger liners.

The Boston-bound West African liner West Kebar, damaged and leaking with a cargo of wild animals aboard, released a freighter which had come to her aid about 300 miles southeast of New York but asked Coast Guard cutters to stand by.

Another West African liner, the Otho, 130 miles due south of the West Kebar, was taking water in a forward hold but the skipper radioed that he believed he could ride out the storm and reach New York late Wednesday or early Thursday.

S. E. Businessmen Protest Bus Station At Pa. Ave. Bridge

The Southeast Business Men's Association last night protested the erection of a brick bus and streetcar transfer station at the end of the new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge as being "inadequate and ridiculous."

It was pointed out that the transfer station cost only $7,000, while the bridge structure cost $2,500,000. It was termed not architecturally in keeping with the bridge. The matter was referred to the House District Committee.

The association approved the District annual budget calling for three new schools and for improved streets in the Southeast section of the city. The placing of death markers in front of business establishments where persons are killed by traffic was protested by the group on grounds that business is hampered by the markers.

The meeting of the association was held at 314 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. More than 50 members attended.

Germany Caters To Whims of Sub Commanders

Berlin, Jan. 13 (AP).—German submarine aces are making their winter raids in "custom-built" submarines.

Lieut. Comdr. Guenther Prien, acclaimed as the "hero of Scapa Flow" and destroyer of the British battleship Royal Oak, had the periscope on his submarine altered to fit his height. He said the change made a decisive improvement in observation, even in the heaviest seas.

Joachim Scheppke, another top-flight U-boat commander, is especially tall and has been cramped by long weeks in the narrow submarine. He is having alterations made on his ship to make life easier.

Lieut. Comdr. Otto Kretschmer made technical suggestions which enabled dock workers to install new mechanism allowing his craft to submerge 30 per cent faster than normally.

Roosevelt on Way To Capital, Silent On Willkie Support

Hyde Park, N. Y., Jan. 13 (INS).—President Roosevelt left by train for Washington tonight after a weekend at his Hudson Valley home. Congressional leaders were expected at the White House in the morning to give the Chief Executive an estimate on prospects for early adoption of the lease-lend British aid bill.

The President withheld comment on Wendell Willkie's indorsement of the measure, as well as his proposal that Congress set a definite time limit on the vast emergency powers contemplated for the White House.

This afternoon the President began work on the first draft of the inaugural address he will deliver next Monday.

U. S. Buying 'War Metals' in Mexico

Copyright by New York Times

Mexico City, Jan. 13.—Great activity of agents of the totalitarian powers in supplying them with Mexican "war metals," such as mercury, tungsten, molybdenum and vanadium, has caused the United States to investigate the possibility of killing this traffic at its source by securing the whole Mexican output for itself. It is now openly in the market for mercury.

The United States already has more than enough of these metals, and the objective therefore is to prevent them from reaching the hands of potential enemies.

On the other hand, it is impossible to bid indefinitely for metals in the open market without running prices up to prohibitive heights.

Four Cars Crash On Same Corner In 2 Accidents

Two accidents within a few minutes on the same corner disabled a Casualty Hospital ambulance, and damaged an automobile, taxicab and truck last night.

According to police, the ambulance, driven by William Gary, 29, colored, of 217 F Street Northwest, and the cab, operated by R. E. Elliott, 50, of 718 Thirteenth Street Southeast, collided at the corner of First and H Streets Northeast.

A few minutes later, an auto driven by Eleanor O. Hutton, 51, of 41 Bryant Street Northwest, and a Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. truck, driven by Quincy Lowe, 33, colored, of 15 M Street Northwest, similarly bumped. No one was hurt.

Capt. Puryear Forced to Bail Out Of Burning Plane

Vineland, N. J., Jan. 13 (INS).—While two other Army planes circled helplessly, Capt. Romulus W. Puryear, commanding officer of the Thirty-third Pursuit Squadron at Bolling Field, Washington, today was forced to bail out of his burning plane.

The officer floated to safety suffering only a sprained ankle when he landed. His plane, a single-seated Curtiss P-40, crashed into a sandbank near Iona Lake.

A passerby drove to Puryear's aid and rushed him to Newcomb Hospital, in Vineland. Two pilots following Puryear in a flight to Mitchel Field, N. Y., proceeded on their journey after seeing their superior land safely.

Noel's Article Held Unofficial

James J. Hayden, editor of the Journal of the District Bar Association, yesterday declared that there was "nothing official" about recent criticism of the United States Court of Appeals here on the part of F. Regis Noel, a former president of the association.

Noel said in an article he wrote for the Journal that the court neglected local matters and quoted certain statistics purporting to support his view.

Hayden said that "neither the association nor the editorial staff of the Journal is necessarily committed to the views expressed by any person whose article is accepted for publication."

Colored Hospital Plan Opposed

The Medico-Chirurgical Society of the District of Columbia announced yesterday that its board of governors had unanimously voted to refuse indorsement of a plan to establish a $350,000 hospital for colored people here.

The National Association for Hospitalization of Negroes will launch a campaign to raise funds for such a hospital at a mass meeting Wednesday night at the A. M. E. Zion Church.

The Medico-Chirurgical Society, America's oldest Negro medical organization, described the hospital association's plan as "unsound and impractical."

Contract Bridge

A player signing himself Fred D. submits today's hand which brought a big, fat rubber to the clever declarer who managed to fulfill a seemingly impossible doubled club slam by artful playing. One little slip by West, ordinarily a strong defender, who lazily based a discard on declarer's trap-play instead of his own knowledge of the hand, cost him and his partner game, slam, double, rubber and bridge game.

The ten of diamonds was opened, declarer ducked in dummy, East played low and West then made the good lead of his singleton club. South went into a long huddle and proceeded to give the hand the only play that will give him a chance. He won with the ace of clubs in dummy; pulled back the king of diamonds. It was covered by East, ruffed by South, and things looked hopeful as West dropped the diamond seven.

Declarer drew back the jack of diamonds, East again covering, and the encouraging spade. South felt he had the hand analyzed correctly. East was probably marked with four clubs, and at least four diamonds. Furthermore, East was too good a player to double if he had the king of spades; he wanted nothing but the diamond opening, therefore, his double.

Declarer drew the jack of diamond, East again covering, and the nine from West established two good diamonds in dummy. South now had a chance but he still didn't feel too good, noticing as he drew the last clubs, more "high-lows" in spades from West. It began to look more than ever that East had started with a 4-4-4-1 pattern.

South led a small heart to the king in dummy. On the eight of diamonds declarer discarded a spade as did West. Now here it came! The last diamond was cashed and East desperately threw his single spade, trying to beg his partner to keep his suit covered.

South threw the spade queen. West went into conference with himself, but the queen of hearts, plus the discard of the spade queen by declarer, ruined him. He pitched a spade and South's spade ace, small spade and ace of hearts took the last three tricks, making six clubs, doubled.
